

Contents

Preface	xi
Abbreviations used in the text	xiv
What is propaganda?	xvii
Part I The organisation of propaganda
1 The demythologising of Crewe House	3
2 The Propaganda Ministry in peace-time	11
(a) Foundation	11
(b) Propaganda and Broadcasting Divisions	17
(c) Press Division	20
(d) Foreign Division	35
(e) Film Division	37
(f) Culture	41
(g) Conclusion	47
3 The British war-time organisation for propaganda	53
(a) The Ministry of Information	53
(b) The Ministry and the public	71
(c) The Ministry and the BBC Home Service	80
(d) The Political Warfare Executive and the BBC European Service	88
4 The Propaganda Minister in war-time	103
(a) Goebbels loses control over the Press	103
(b) The more 'magnetic' media	110
(c) The Minister as columnist	114
(d) The realist in the Nazi midst	116
(e) The publicity tail wags the policy dog	117
(f) The news loses credibility	120
(g) The spell-binder loses touch	122
(h) The Gambetta of the German war of despair	124

(i) Can the people be trusted?	125
(j) Understudy rather than replacement	127
(k) Seer or quack?	129
5 German external broadcasting	133
(a) General	133
(b) The services to Britain	137

Part II The progress of propaganda

6 The start of the war	147
7 The German public and the war	148
8 The British public and the war	152
9 Naval occasions	157
10 Bolshevism and plutocracy	162
11 German relations with the USA	165
12 The search for the 'Good German'	167
13 Lies and losses	171
14 The Norwegian campaign	176
15 The campaign in the West	179
16 Britain's moment of truth	185
17 Rumour and careless talk	190
18 The Battle of Britain	195
19 The bombers begin	200
20 Parallel lapses of morale	206
21 The Italian liability	211
22 The V Campaign	214
23 The flight of Hess	217
24 Crete	222
25 The attack on Russia	224
26 The Atlantic Charter	231
27 The first failure in Russia	234
28 The USA as belligerent	243
29 Britain's bleakest months	249
30 The raid on St Nazaire	254
31 Ration cuts	258
32 British area bombing	262
33 Echoes from the Pacific	270
34 The Battle of the Atlantic	272
35 Germany's successful summer	277
36 The turning-points	288
37 The plutocracy proves egalitarian	295

38	Crimes against humanity	299
39	The inadequate myth	305
40	The awkward formula	312
41	The overblown trumpet	321
42	Katyn	332
43	Tunisgrad	335
44	The bomber foiled	339
45	The weak link breaks	347
46	The rival siren	359
47	Escape routes barred	362
48	Suspense before D-day	369
49	Retaliation disappoints	377
50	The revolt of the Colonels	384
51	The halted climax	393
52	British intelligence and German morale	401
53	The Ardennes offensive	404
54	Where were the Werewolves?	406
55	Spelling out surrender	411
56	Tailpiece	416

Part III Conclusion

57	What propaganda is	419
58	British and German propaganda	426
59	What difference did propaganda make?	437
60	The place of publicity in the organisation of government	440

	Note on sources	446
	Notes	458
	Index	503