

Contents

List of plates	page vii
Foreword	ix
Preface	xi
Chronological table	xiii
Dramatis personae	xvi
Abbreviations	xvii
Introduction	1
Part one: July 1397 to May 1399
1. Richard II's coup of 1397 according to the monk of Evesham	54
2. The king's duplicity according to a Canterbury chronicler	64
3. Thomas Walsingham on the tyranny of King Richard	70
4. Extracts from the Rolls of Parliament, 1397–99	78
5. Two Cistercian views of Richard	94
6. The St Albans conspiracy and the Bolingbroke–Mowbray dispute according to a French source	99
7. Bolingbroke's exile in Paris, 1398–99	105
Part two: June to September 1399
Map. The revolution of 1399	108
8. Bolingbroke's departure from France	109
9. The alliance between Bolingbroke and Orléans, 17 June 1399	112
10. Thomas Walsingham's account of the revolution	115
11. Bolingbroke's campaign and his meeting with Richard according to the monk of Evesham	126
12. Two accounts of Bolingbroke's progress through England	132

13. The betrayal and capture of the king according to Jean Creton	137
14. Two Cistercian accounts of the perjury of Henry Bolingbroke	153
15. An eye-witness account of the revolution: the chronicle of Adam Usk	157
16. The 'Manner of King Richard's Renunciation'	162
17. The 'Record and Process'	168
18. The protest of the Bishop of Carlisle	190
19. The protest of the Percies	192
Part three: October 1399 to February 1400
20. The first parliament of Henry IV, October-November 1399	200
21. The 'Epiphany Rising' and the death of the king	224
22. The 'Epiphany Rising': contrasting fortunes	235
23. Rumours and omens of Richard's fate	240
Appendix A: The Duke of York's army, July 1399	247
Appendix B: Bolingbroke's army in 1399	252
Bibliography	254
Index	259