CHAPTER I.

PAGE

161 to convert an intended voyage to Orkney into a journey to England—Objects of the journey—Carter Fell—The Border Line—Well for England it should have been so doggedly maintained by the weaker country—Otterburn—The Mountain Limestone in England, what it is not in Scotland, a true Mountain Limestone—Scenery changes as we enter the Coal Measures—Wretched weather—Newcastle—Methodists—Controversy on the Atonement—The popular mind in Scotland mainly developed by its theology—Newcastle Museum; rich in its Geology and its Antiquities; both branches of one subject—Geologic history of the Roman Invasion—Durham Cathedral—The Monuments of Nature greatly more enduring than those of man—Cyathophyllum Fungites—The spotted tubers, and what they indicated—The destiny of a nation involved in the growth of a minute fungus, 1

CHAPTER II.

Weather still miserably bad; suited to betray the frequent poverty of English landscape—Gloomy prospects of the agriculturist—Corn-Law League—York; a true sacerdotal city—Cathedral; noble exterior; interior not less impressive; Congreve's sublime Description—Unpardonable solecism—Procession—Dean Cockburn; crusade against the geologists—Cathedral service unworthy of the Cathedral—Walk on the city ramparts—Flat fertility of the surrounding country—The more interesting passages in the history of York supplied by the makers—Robinson Crusoe—Jeanie Deans—Trial of Eugene Aram—Aram's real character widely different from that drawn by the novelist, 17

CHAPTER III.

	PAGE
Quit York for Manchester—A character—Quaker lady—Peculiar feature in the husbandry of the cloth district—Leeds—Simplicity manifested in the geologic framework of English scenery—The denuding agencies almost invariably the sole architects of the landscape—Manchester; characteristic peculiarities; the Irwell; collegiate church; light and elegant proportions of the building; its grotesque sculptures; these indicative of the scepticism of the age in which they were produced—St. Bartholomew's day—Sermon on Saints' day—Timothy's grandmother—The Puseyite a High-churchman become earnest—Passengers of a Sunday-evening train—Sabbath amusement not very conducive to happiness—The economic value of the Sabbath ill understood by the utilitarian—Testimony of history on the point,	29

CHAPTER IV.

Quit Manchester for Wolverhampton—Scenery of the New Red Sandstone; apparent repetition of pattern—The frequent marshes of England; curiously represented in the national literature; influence on the national superstitions—Wolverhampton—Peculiar aspect of the Dudley coal-field; striking passage in its history—The rise of Birmingham into a great manufacturing town, an effect of the development of its mineral treasures—Upper Ludlow deposit; Aynestry limestone; both deposits of peculiar interest to the Scotch geologist—The Lingula Lewisii and Terebratula Wilsoni —General resemblance of the Silurian fossils to those of the mountain limestone—First-born of the vertebrata yet known—Order of creation—The Wren's Nest—Fossils of the Wenlock limestone; in a state of beautiful keeping—Anecdote— Asaphus Caudatus ; common, it would seem, to both the Silurian and Carboniferous rocks—Limestone miners—Noble gallery excavated in the hill,	48
---	----

CHAPTER V.

Dudley; significant marks of the mining town—Kindly Scotch landlady—Temperance coffee-house—Little Samuel the teetotaller—
--	--

	PAGE
Curious incident—Anecdote—The resuscitated spinet—Forbearance of little Samuel—Dudley Museum ; singularly rich in Silurian fossils— Megalichthys Hibberti —Fossils from Mount Lebanon ; very modern compared with those of the Hill of Dudley—Geology peculiarly fitted to revolutionize one's ideas of modern and ancient—Fossils of extreme antiquity furnished by a Canadian township that had no name twenty years ago—Fossils from the old Egyptian desert found to be comparatively of yesterday—Dudley Castle and Castle-hill—Cromwell's mission—Castle finds a faithful chronicler in an old serving-maid—Her narrative—Caves and fossils of the Castle-hill—Extensive excavations—Superiority of the natural to the artificial cavern—Fossils of the Scottish Grauwacke—Analogy between the female lobster and trilobite,	68

CHAPTER VI.

Stourbridge—Effect of Plutonic convulsion on the surrounding scenery—Hagley ; description in the "Seasons"—Geology the true anatomy of landscape—Geologic sketch of Hagley—The road to the Races—The old stone-cutter—Thomson's Hollow—His visits to Hagley—Shenstone's Urn—Peculiarities of taste founded often on a substratum of personal character—Illustration—Rousseau—Pope's Haunt—Lyttelton's high admiration of the genius of Pope—Description—Singularly extensive and beautiful landscape ; drawn by Thomson—Reflection—Amazing multiplicity of the prospect illustrative of a peculiarity in the descriptions of the "Seasons"—Addison's canon on landscape ; corroborated by Shenstone,	87
--	----

CHAPTER VII.

Hagley parish church—The sepulchral marbles of the Lytteltons—Epitaph on the Lady Lucy—The phrenological doctrine of hereditary transmission ; unsupported by history, save in a way in which history can be made to support anything—Thomas Lord Lyttelton ; his moral character a strange contrast to that of his father—The elder Lyttelton ; his deathbed—Aberrations of the younger Lord—Strange ghost story ; curious modes of accounting for it—Return to Stourbridge—Late Drive—Hales Owen, 104
---	--

CHAPTER VIII.

	PAGE
Abbotsford and the Leasowes—The one place naturally suggestive of the other—Shenstone—The Leasowes his most elaborate composition—The English squire and his mill—Hales Owen Abbey; interesting, the subject of one of Shenstone's larger poems—The old anti-Popish feeling of England well exemplified by the fact—Its origin and history—Decline—Infidelity naturally favourable to the resuscitation and reproduction of Popery—The two naileresses—Cecilia and Delia—Skeleton description of the Leasowes—Poetic filling up—The spinster—The fountain,	121

CHAPTER IX.

Detour—The Leasowes deteriorated wherever the poet had built, and improved wherever he had planted—View from the hanging wood—Stratagem of the island screen—Virgil's grave—Mound of the Hales Owen and Birmingham Canal; its sad interference with Shenstone's poetic description of the infancy of the Stour—Vanished cascade and root-house—Sommerville's urn—"To all friends round the Wrekin"— River scenery of the Leasowes; their great variety—Peculiar arts of the poet; his vistas, when seen from the wrong end, realizations of Hogarth's caricature—Shenstone the greatest of landscape-gardeners—Estimate of Johnson—Goldsmith's history of the Leasowes; their after history,	138
---	-----

CHAPTER X.

Shenstone's verses—The singular unhappiness of his paradise—English cider—Scotch and English dwellings contrasted—The nailers of Hales Owen; their politics a century ago—Competition of the Scotch nailers; unsuccessful, and why—Samuel Salt, the Hales Owen poet—Village Church—Salt-works at Droitwich; their great antiquity—Appearance of the village—Problem furnished by the salt deposits of England; various theories—Rock-salt deemed by some a volcanic product; by others the deposition of an overcharged sea; by yet others the produce of vast lagoons—Leland—The manufacture of salt from sea-water superseded, even in Scotland, by the rock-salt of England,	154
---	-----

CHAPTER XI.

	PAGE
Walk to the Clent Hills—Incident in a fruit-shop—St. Kenelm's Chapel—Legend of St. Kenelm—Ancient village of Clent; its appearance and character—View from the Clent Hills—Mr. Thomas Moss—Geologic peculiarities of the landscape; illustration—The Scotch drift—Boulders; these transported by the agency of ice floes—Evidence of the former existence of a broad ocean channel—The geography of the geologist—Aspect of the earth ever changing—Geography of the palæozoic period; of the secondary; of the tertiary—Ocean the great agent of change and dilapidation,	168

CHAPTER XII.

Geological colouring of the landscape—Close proximity in this neighbourhood of the various geologic systems—The Oolite; its medicinal springs; how formed—Cheltenham—Strathpeffer—The saliferous system; its organic remains and footprints—Record of curious passages in the history of the earlier reptiles—Salt deposits—Theory—The abstraction of salt from the sea on a large scale probably necessary to the continued existence of its denizens—Lower New Red Sandstone—Great geologic revolution—Elevation of the trap—Hills of Clent; era of the elevation—Coal Measures; their three forests in the neighbourhood of Wolverhampton—Comparatively small area of the Birmingham coal-field—Vast coal-fields of the United States—Berkeley's prophecy—Old Red Sandstone—Silurian system—Blank,	186
---	-----

CHAPTER XIII.

Birmingham; incessant clamour of the place—Toy-shop of Britain; serious character of the games in which its toys are chiefly employed—Museum—Liberality of the scientific English—Musical genius of Birmingham—Theory—Controversy with the Yorkers—Anecdote—The English language spoken very variously by the English; in most cases spoken very ill—English type of person—Attend a Puseyite chapel—Puseyism a feeble imitation of Popery—Popish cathedral—Popery the true resting-place of the Puseyite—Sketch of the rise and progress of the Puseyite principle; its purposed object not attained; hostility to science—English Funerals,	206
---	-----

CHAPTER XIV.

	PAGE
Drive from Birmingham to Stratford rather tame--Ancient building in a modern-looking street; of rude and humble appearance--"The Immortal Shakspeare born in this house"--Description of the interior--The walls and ceiling covered with names--Albums--Shakspeare, Scott, Dickens; greatly different in their intellectual stature, but yet all of one family--Principle by which to take their measure--No dramatist ever draws an intellect taller than his own--Imitative faculty--The Reports of Dickens--Learning of Shakspeare--New Place--The Rev. Francis Gastrall--Stratford Church--The poet's grave; his bust; far superior to the idealized representations--The Avon--The jubilee; and Cowper's description of it--The true hero-worship--Quit Stratford for Olney--Get into bad company by the way--Gentlemen of the Fancy--Adventure,	228

CHAPTER XV.

Cowper; his singular magnanimity of character; argument furnished by his latter religious history against the selfish philosophy--Valley of the Ouse--Approach to Olney--Appearance of the town--Cowper's house; parlour; garden--Pippin tree planted by the Poet--Summer-house written within and without--John Tawell--Delightful old woman--Weston-Underwood--Thomas Scott's house--The park of the Throckmortons--Walk described in "The Task"--Wilderness--Ancient Avenue--Alcove; prospect which it commands, as drawn by Cowper--Colonnade--Rustic Bridge--Scene of the "Needless Alarm"--The milk thistle,	248
--	-----

CHAPTER XVI.

Yardley Oak; of immense size and imposing appearance--Cowper's description singularly illustrative of his complete mastery over language--Peasant's Nest--The poet's vocation peculiarly one of revolution--The school of Pope; supplanted in its unproductive old age by that of Cowper--Cowper's Coadjutors in the work--Economy of literary revolution--The old English yeoman--Quit Olney--Companions in the journey--Incident--Newport Pagnell--Mr. Bull and the French Mystics--Lady of the Fancy--Champion of all England--Pugilism--Anecdote,	264
---	-----

CHAPTER XVII.

	PAGE
Cowper and the geologists—Geology in the poet's days in a state of great immaturity—Case different now—Folly of committing the Bible to a false science—Galileo—Geologists at one in all their more important deductions; vast antiquity of the earth one of these—State of the question—Illustration—Presumed thickness of the fossiliferous strata—Peculiar order of their organic contents; of their fossil fish in particular, as ascertained by Agassiz—The geologic races of animals entirely different from those which sheltered with Noah in the ark—Alleged discrepancy between geologic fact and the Mosiac record not real—Inference based on the opening verses of the book of Genesis—Parallel passage adduced to prove the inference unsound—The supposition that fossils may have been created such examined; unworthy of the divine wisdom; contrary to the principles which regulate human belief; subversive of the grand argument founded on design—The profounder theologians of the day not anti-geologists—Geologic fact in reality of a kind fitted to perform important work in the two theologies, natural and revealed; subversive of the "infinite series" argument of the atheist; subversive, too, of the objection drawn by infidelity from an astronomical analogy—Counter-objection—Illustration,	282

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Penny-a-mile Train and its Passengers— Aunt Jonathan—London by Night—St. Paul's; the City as seen from the Dome—The Lord Mayor's coach—Westminster Abbey—The Gothic architecture a less exquisite production of the human mind than the Grecian—Poets' Corner—The Mission of the Poets—The tombs of the kings—The monument of James Watt—A humble coffee-house and its frequenters—The woes of genius in London—Old 110 Thames Street—The Tower—The Thames Tunnel—Longings of the true Londoner for rural life and the country; their influence on literature—The British Museum; its splendid collection of fossil remains—Human skeleton of Guadaloupe—The Egyptian Room—Domesticities of the ancient Egyptians—Cycle of reproduction—The Mummies,	316

CHAPTER XIX

	PAGE
Harrow-on-the-Hill—Descent through the formations from the Tertiary to the Coal Measures—Journey of a hundred-and-twenty miles northwards , identical, geologically, with a journey of a mile and a quarter downwards —English very unlike Scottish landscape in its geologic framework—Birmingham fair—Credulity of the rural English; striking contrast which they furnish in this respect to their countrymen of the knowing type—The English grades of intellectual character of immense range; more in extremes than those of the Scotch—Front rank of British intellect in which there stands no Scotchman; probable cause—A class of English, on the other hand, greatly lower than the Scotch; naturally less curious; acquire, in consequence, less of the developing pabulum—The main cause of the difference to be found, however, in the very dissimilar religious character of the two countries—the Scot naturally less independent than the Englishman; strengthened, however, where his character most needs strength, by his religion—The independence of the Englishman subjected at the present time to two distinct adverse influences, the modern Poor Law and the Tenant-at-will system—Walsall—Liverpool—Sort of lodging-houses in which one is sure to meet many Dissenters,	331

CHAPTER XX.

Dissent a Mid-formation Organism in England—Church-of-Englandism strong among the upper and lower classes; its peculiar principle of strength among the lower; among the upper—The Church of England one of the strongest institutions of the country—Puseyism, however, a canker-worm at its root; partial success of the principle—The type of English Dissent essentially different from that of Scotland; the causes of the difference deep in the diverse character of the two peoples—Insulated character of the Englishman productive of Independency—Adhesive character of the Scotch productive of Presbyterianism—Attempts to legislate for the Scotch in Church matters on an English principle always unfortunate—Erastianism; essentially a different thing to the English Churchman from what it is to the Scot—Reason why—Independent Scotch congregation in a rural district—Rarely well based; and why—Conclusion,	347
