

Contents

Acknowledgements	x
Copyright acknowledgements	xi
Chapter 1 Introduction: what is 'development'?	1
People, places and progress: thinking spatially about development
Mental maps and imagined geographies of difference
Development and the geography of power
Re/thinking geographies of development: a guide to what follows
Chapter 2 Illuminating the dark side of development	20
Introduction: an incomplete and contested picture of progress
The global 'protest caravan'
Decolonising the mindset of development
The political and psychological satisfaction of 'helping' the poor
The (geo)politics of aid
Conclusions: geopolitics and the 'apothecary' of development remedies
Chapter 3 Geographers and 'the Tropics'	45
Introduction: Orientalism and tropical geographies
Geographies of colonial modernity
From tropical to development geography (via imperialism)
From 'pious Eurocentrism' to geographies of 'anti-development'

Conclusions: geo-writings and the tropical worlds of development
Chapter 4 Development thinking and the mystical 'kingdom of abundance'	71
Introduction: knowledge and the era of modernity
The Enlightenment and the theorisation of development as progress
The 'Sinatra Doctrine' and the Cold War
Dependency: just another narration of tradition vs. modernity?
Imagining a post-development era
Conclusions: deconstructions and reconstructions of development
Chapter 5 Thirdworldism and the imagination of global development	95
Introduction: a critical geopolitics of Third World development
'The West' and 'the rest'
The concept of the three worlds
Lost for wor(l)ds?: worlding and otherness
Conclusions: colonialism, decolonisation and the pursuit of development
Chapter 6 Postcolonial geographies of development	119
Introduction: what is postcolonialism?
Postcolonialism and national belonging
Language, culture and identity
Partnership or trusteeship?
Conclusions: postcolonialism and the voices of the poor: can anyone hear us?
Chapter 7 Globalisation, government and power	143
Introduction: globalisation and the non-western world
Neoliberalism and 'actually existing' globalisation
Globalisation and the myth of free trade
Globalisation and the post-Washington apothecary
Conclusions: governance, geopolitics and development: towards a new kind of multilateralism?
Chapter 8 The dissemination of development	169
Introduction: development as a 'global moral imperative'?
Obscuring the causes of poverty: the poverty process acronyms
Poverty, livelihoods discourse and social capital

---

Deconstructing the 'development gateway'
Conclusions: solutions in search of problems?

---

Chapter 9 'Theorising back': views from the South and the globalisation of resistance 194

Opening a space in the history and geography of international development
Empowerment from above or below?
Geopolitics from below and the crises of state-
centred developmentalism
'We do not need you to save our forests'
Neoliberalism, democracy and resistance in post-apartheid South Africa
Conclusions: a global fabric of struggle?

---

Chapter 10 Conclusions: resisting the temptations of remedies, mirages and fairy-tales 219

Towards 2015
Geographies of neoliberalisation
Imagining a post-development era
Decolonisation and development (geography):
beyond trusteeship

Glossary 236
Bibliography 238
Index 258