

Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
A Note on Language	ix
INTRODUCTION
Reading World Literature in English	i
CHAPTER 1
'The Universal Possession of Mankind': The Discursive Politics of World Literature	7
CHAPTER 2
Rhetorical Power and Symbolic Capital: The Middle Zone of Literary Space	63
CHAPTER 3
At Home in World Literature? Rabindranath Tagore's The Home and the World	109
CHAPTER 4
'I now lay before you the book, the inkwell, and the pens': Tahar Ben Jelloun's The Sand Child in English-Language Criticism	165

CHAPTER 5

Who is Afraid of Dario Fo? Translation and Adaptation Strategies in English-Language Versions of Accidental Death of an Anarchist	233
---	-----

BY WAY OF CONCLUSION

Why Investigate Acts of Cross-Cultural Reading?	275
---	-----

APPENDIX I

Summary of The Sand Child	287
----------------------------------	-----

APPENDIX II

Untapped Resources: A Provisional Bibliography on Tahar Ben Jelloun's The Sand Child in French	297
--	-----

Bibliography	303
--------------	-----

Index	325
-------	-----