

Contents

Acknowledgements .....	xi
Prelude .....	xiii
1      Introduction: New England Writers' Houses—Cradles of American Literature? .....	1
2      Literary Tourism and 19th-Century Writers' Houses in New England: Contexts, Perspectives, Implications .....	11
2.1    Literary Tourism: Definitions, Variants, and Development .....	11
2.2    Literary Tourism in the Academy .....	17
2.3    Methodological and Conceptual Parameters .....	21
2.3.1   19th-Century Writers' Houses in New England as Tourist Sites .....	24
2.3.2   The Sights of 19th-Century Writers' Houses in New England ..	37
2.3.3   Literary Tourism at 19th-Century New England Writers' Houses as Performance .....	83
2.3.4   Commodification at 19th-Century Writers' Houses in New England .....	97
3      "Yes, within this very room": Merging the Discourses of Region and Nation at Longfellow House—Washington's Headquarters National Historic Site .....	107
3.1    The House at 105 Brattle Street, Cambridge: A Brief Historical Overview, 1759–1950 .....	108
3.2    The Onset of Literary Tourism at 105 Brattle Street .....	114
3.3    Appropriating the House, Appropriating the Legacy .....	119
3.4    Naming the House, Branding the Place .....	125
3.5    Alignment of Political, Cultural, and Literary History .....	136
3.6    Transcending and Asserting the Region .....	144
Illustrations Chapter 2 .....	155

Illustrations Chapter 3 .....	160
4      “Home is a holy thing—”: Making the Private Public at the Emily Dickinson Museum .....	171
4.1 The House at 280 Main Street, Amherst: A Brief Historical Overview, 1813-1965 .....	173
4.2 Two Houses, One Museum.....	177
4.3 “Quintessentially Private”?—The Elusiveness of Emily Dickinson.....	187
4.4 Claiming Emily.....	193
4.5 Reconstructing Privacy, Inviting the Public .....	202
4.6 The Writer’s Sanctum.....	210
5      “My room seems a ship’s cabin”: Popularizing the Non-Popular at Herman Melville’s Arrowhead .....	217
5.1 The House at 780 Holmes Road, Pittsfield: A Brief Historical Overview, 1780s-1975.....	219
5.2 Melville’s House and Berkshire County History .....	224
5.3 Climbed Canons and Unread Books .....	232
5.4 Neglecting and Retrieving the Writer .....	241
5.5 Obstacles to Exhibiting Melville at Arrowhead.....	250
5.6 A Piazza and a Mountain: Arrowhead’s Melvilliana .....	256
Illustrations Chapter 4 .....	271
Illustrations Chapter 5 .....	279
6      Conclusion .....	287
List of Illustrations .....	293
Archival Materials .....	299
Bibliography .....	309
Index .....	337