

Contents

Preface ix

Introduction xi

1. Written Language	1
Origins of Writing	1
The Emergence of True Writing	3
The Origins of English Spelling	5
Levels of Representation in Present-day English Spelling	6
The word level of representation	7
The morphemic level of representation	8
The phonemic level of representation	8
Summary of Chapter 1	9
2. Reading by Ear and by Eye	11
Reading by Ear	11
Phonic Mediation Theory and Some Objections to It	15
Reading by Eye	16
The Rumelhart and McClelland model of direct visual word recognition	17
Accessing meanings and pronunciations	21
Summary of Chapter 2	22
3. Routes and Options in Word Comprehension and Naming	25
Evidence for Separate Visual and Auditory Word Recognition Systems	25

The Role of Morphemes in Word Recognition and Production	26
Naming Words	27
Addressed and assembled pronunciations	27
Routes to “assembled” pronunciations	29
Comprehending an assembled pronunciation	30
The Final Model	31
Summary of Chapter 3	34
4. The Acquired Dyslexias	35
Varieties of Acquired Dyslexia	36
Visually based dyslexias	36
Phonological dyslexia	37
Reading without meaning	37
Surface dyslexia	38
Deep dyslexia	41
General Issues	44
Summary of Chapter 4	45
5. Words in Combinations	48
Eye Movements in Reading	48
The effective visual field	49
Reading rate and comprehension	50
Comprehending Words in Combinations	50
The products of comprehension	52
The Role of Prior Context in Word Recognition	53
Routes to Reading Aloud	55
The Role of Sound in Reading	57
Summary of Chapter 5	59
6. Spelling and Writing	60
Planning to Write	60
Phonic Mediation of Spelling?	63
Homophones and irregular words	63
Phonological dysgraphia	64
Addressed Spellings	64
Deep dysgraphia	65
Slips of the pen and addressed spellings	68
Patient R.D.	70
Toward a Composite Model for Addressed and Assembled Spellings	71
Analogies and correspondences in assembled spellings	72
Applying the Model	74
Spelling errors	74
Individual differences	75

Surface dysgraphia	76
Amnesic dysgraphia	77
From Graphemes to Movements	78
The Relationship Between Writing and Reading	80
Simultaneous writing and reading	81
The Relationship Between Acquired Dyslexia and Acquired Dysgraphia	82
Patient R.G.	83
Letter-by-letter reading	83
Summary of Chapter 6	84
 7. Learning to Read and Write		86
Marsh, Friedman, Welch, and Desberg's Four-Stage Theory of Learning to Read	87
Stage One: Glance-and-guess	87
Stage Two: Sophisticated guessing	88
Stage Three: The acquisition of simple grapheme-phoneme correspondencies	89
Stage Four: The skilled reader	90
Similarities Between Young Readers and Acquired Surface Dyslexics	90
Children's Use of Context in Reading	92
The Influence of Teaching Methods on the Acquisition of Reading Strategies	93
Learning to Write	95
How do children learn to spell?	96
Young spellers and surface dysgraphics	98
Teaching Reading and Writing	99
Linguistic awareness	101
Summary of Chapter 7	103
 8. Developmental Dyslexia and Dysgraphia		105
The Concept of Developmental Dyslexia	105
Is Dyslexia a Disease?	106
Unitary Explanations of Development Dyslexia	107
Unitary hypothesis 1: "Dyslexia is a perceptual disorder"	108
Unitary hypothesis 2: "Dyslexia is caused by faulty eye movements"	109
Unitary hypothesis 3: "Dyslexia is a disorder of short-term memory"	110
Developmental Dyslexia and the Left Cerebral Hemisphere	110
Comparing Developmental and Acquired Dyslexia	112
Is developmental dyslexia like acquired deep dyslexia?	113
Is developmental dyslexia like acquired surface dyslexia?	115

Developmental phonological dyslexia	117
Developmental letter-by-letter (spelling) dyslexia?	118
Hyperlexia	119
The Varieties of Developmental Dyslexia	120
Mitterer's (1982) division of poor readers into whole-word and recoding types	121
Boder's (1971; 1973) distinction between dyseidetic and dysphonetic dyslexics	121
The EXPECTED nature of individual differences among poor (and good) readers	122
Dyslexic Spelling and Writing	124
Teaching Dyslexics	127
Summary of Chapter 8	128

References	130
Author Index	140
Subject Index	145