

Contents

Foreword	page xi
Preface	xv
List of abbreviations	xix
Table of cases and procedural documents	xxii
Table of treaties and other international instruments	xxv
Introduction	1
1 Strategically created treaty conflicts	3
On treaty conflict and the questions that follow	3
The challenged Court, and other stories	3
Legal doctrine on treaty conflict	8
Law and politics in confluence	16
Between epiphenomenality and lawfare	17
One reformulation of that question about international law	18
Epiphenomenality	20
Lawfare	23
Which?	27
The argument of this book	28
A dual analysis	28
Key findings	28
Unpacking ideas	31
Outline of the chapters	41
Part I International law thought	45
2 Writing the 'principle of political decision' into the law of treaties	47

Introduction	47
Outline of the argument	49
VCLT Article 30 and its discontents	52
A reductive view of treaty conflict	53
No fetters on the exercise of political decision	55
Explaining the principle of political decision	56
Compatibility with fundamental principles	56
Imprimatur of the VCLT	57
A space for responsive politics	58
A caveat on stability and change	60
Competing philosophies of international law?	61
Previous formulations	61
Indicative of complete philosophies of international law ...	63
... or crises of confidence (but not lack of faith)?	66
Between philosophy and anxiety	66
Lauterpacht	67
Fitzmaurice	71
Waldock	75
The ILC	79
International law as an ILC project	82
The fifth element	83
A long view?	89
Eddies in the mainstream	93
3 The idea of effective implementation of treaties	95
Three variations on a theme	95
Approximate application of treaties	99
Lauterpacht and South-West Africa	100
After Lauterpacht	104
Misreadings in Gabčíkovo–Nagymaros	106
Approximate application and international law	109
Compliance management	113
The 'new sovereignty' and the managerial approach	114
Treaty adaptation	120
Expectations of law	123
Accommodation via treaty coordination or regime interaction	125
Beyond resolution: from treaty conflict to institutional conflict	126

Introduction	47
Outline of the argument	49
VCLT Article 30 and its discontents	52
A reductive view of treaty conflict	53
No fetters on the exercise of political decision	55
Explaining the principle of political decision	56
Compatibility with fundamental principles	56
Imprimatur of the VCLT	57
A space for responsive politics	58
A caveat on stability and change	60
Competing philosophies of international law?	61
Previous formulations	61
Indicative of complete philosophies of international law ...	63
... or crises of confidence (but not lack of faith)?	66
Between philosophy and anxiety	66
Lauterpacht	67
Fitzmaurice	71
Waldock	75
The ILC	79
International law as an ILC project	82
The fifth element	83
A long view?	89
Eddies in the mainstream	93
3 The idea of effective implementation of treaties	95
Three variations on a theme	95
Approximate application of treaties	99
Lauterpacht and South-West Africa	100
After Lauterpacht	104
Misreadings in Gabčíkovo–Nagymaros	106
Approximate application and international law	109
Compliance management	113
The ‘new sovereignty’ and the managerial approach	114
Treaty adaptation	120
Expectations of law	123
Accommodation via treaty coordination or regime interaction	125
Beyond resolution: from treaty conflict to institutional conflict	126

Treaty interaction	127
Justification for treaty interaction	129
Conceptions of international law	140
Conclusion	143
Part II Treaty conflicts in practice	145
4 Notions of ocean: the dispute over deep seabed mining	147
Back to the future?	147
An overview of the conflict	149
The conventional regime	152
Background to the LOSC	152
The Part XI regime	155
Pioneer investor provisions	158
The common heritage principle in Part XI and Resolution II	159
The Reciprocating States Regime	161
Domestic legislation	161
International agreements	163
Conflict between the LOSC and the RSR	164
A treaty conflict?	164
Divergences between the LOSC and the RSR	165
The situation in the 1980s	165
Principles underpinning the RSR and the LOSC	168
Conflict to compromise: two key moments	172
The Midnight Agreement and Exchange of Notes, 1987	173
The Implementation Agreement, 1994	174
Dynamics of compromise	176
Under the PrepCom: 1983–9	176
The making of the Implementation Agreement	192
International law and the dynamics of compromise	199
Document-rattling: the importance of legal forms	200
Key moves in making legal claims	203
Institutional forums	208
Conclusion	210
5 Courting the United States? The International Criminal Court and Article 98 agreements	212
Introduction	212
The United States' mistrust of the ICC: background and manifestations	217

Conflict	221
The Rome Statute regime for investigation and prosecution	221
Bilateral immunity agreements	224
Conflict between the Rome Statute and the BIAs	225
The Court in practice, 2002–10	234
Self-referrals by Uganda, the DRC and the CAR	235
Sudan's referral by the Security Council and a shift in US policy	242
The OTP and managerialism	246
The early phase	248
Post the Sudan referral	258
A strategy for external communications	265
'An idea whose time has come'	267
'A judicial institution operating in a highly political environment'	269
'No longer a theoretical construct, but a tangible court'	271
A review of the OTP's activities from 2002 to 2010	274
Compliance with the Court	274
The OTP's implementation of the Rome Statute	276
The turn to 'the law'	277
The evolving Court	280
6 Fissions in the nuclear order: the India-US Nuclear Deal and the nuclear-governance regime	282
Introduction	282
The nuclear-governance regime	288
Non-proliferation	289
Safeguards	290
Nuclear energy	293
Disarmament	294
The India-US Nuclear Deal	295
The 2005 Joint Statement: a break from the past	295
The 123 Agreement: terms of the Deal crystallised	299
Treaty conflict	302
Implications of the Deal	306
Threat 1: vertical proliferation by India	308
Threat 2: horizontal proliferation by India	309
Threat 3: impact on the programmes and postures of other States	310
Threat 4: erosion of the NPT-based nuclear-governance regime	315