

Contents

List of figures	page vii
Acknowledgements	x
Introduction	1
Part I Decolonization for colonizers: Europe's transition to the postcolonial era	21
1 Myths of continuity and European exceptionalism: Britain, decolonization, and the Commonwealth family ideal	23
Britain, dominion 'daughters', and India's road to independence	23
Post-war transitions and a new Commonwealth	37
From 1950s imperial crises to the 'wind of change'	49
The British public encounters decolonization	61
Imperial endgames, Commonwealth doubts, European discomforts	67
2 Occupation, resistance, and liberation: the road to Dutch decolonization	78
3 Soldiering on in the shadow of war: decolonizing la plus grande France	106
The French empire from the First World War to the 1930s	108
Vichy, war, and the French Union	119
Indochina's fight for independence	126
Reckoning with Indochina and the struggle over Algérie française , 1954–1958	135
De Gaulle, the new Republic, and the ongoing crisis in North Africa and the hexagon, 1958–1962	146
French decolonization, grandeur , and Europe	157
4 Long live the king? Belgium, the monarchy, and the Congo between the Second World War and the decolonization years	163
5 From rose-coloured map to Carnation Revolution: Portugal's overseas amputations	190

Part II Migrations and multiculturalisms in postcolonial Europe	211
6 Ending empires, coming home: the ghost worlds of European colonial repatriates	213
Introduction	213
The Netherlands and repatriates from Indonesia	216
Resettling imperial Britons	223
Belgians and the Congo	228
France: pieds-noirs and others	236
Portugal's retornados	242
Decolonizing the colonizer	247
7 Ethnic minority immigration from empires lost	251
Introduction	251
Britain's late imperial and New Commonwealth settlers	254
Postcolonial arrivals in the Netherlands from the East Indies and West Indies	270
France, immigration, and les trente glorieuses in context	283
Portugal: A nation of emigration and postcolonial immigration	303
Africans in postcolonial Belgium	311
Conclusion: colonial debts within an integrating Europe?	317
8 Reconfiguring nations: identities, belonging, and multiculturalism in the wake of postcolonial migration	322
Introduction	322
Butter in the melting pot? Multiculturalism in the postcolonial French republic	327
Union Jack, Union Black: new ethnicities and approaches to integration in Britain	349
Postcolonial cultures in a multicultural Netherlands	375
Belgium's African population and new ethnicities in a divided nation	388
Portugal and its diasporas: hybrid cultures and the limits of lusotropicalism in the aftermath of migration	397
Conclusion: national dynamism and defensiveness	412
Part III Memories, legacies, and further directions	415
9 Remembering and forgetting empires	417
Introduction	417
Triggers of entangled imperial memories and forgettings	425
Repatriates and ethnic minorities as leading defenders, critics, and initiators of public discussion	448
Cacophony and silence: selective memories of colonialism and decolonization	474
Conclusion	490
Epilogue: thoughts towards new histories of contemporary Europe	491
Bibliography	505
Index	537