

CONTENTS

Publisher's Note v	·	Editor's Note vii
Preface ix	·	Abbreviations xiii	·	Introduction xv
Notes to Introduction xxxvii

THE BOOK OF INVOCATIONS AND SUPPLICATIONS

PROLOGUE I

CHAPTER ONE: On the General Merit and Profit of Invocation, with an Illustration from the Qur'ān, the Traditions, and the Narratives	5
The Merit of Gathering for Invocation	9
The Merit of Tahlīl	11
The Merit of Tasbīḥ, Taḥmīd, and Other Invocations	16
CHAPTER TWO: On the Forms and Value of Supplication and Some Transmitted Prayers; the Merit of Asking For Forgiveness and of Invoking Blessing upon the Emissary of God (may God bless him and grant him peace)	33
The Merit of Supplication	33
Proprieties of Supplication, which are Ten in Number	34
The Merit of Invoking Blessing upon the Emissary of God (may God bless him and grant him peace) and his Virtue	50
The Merit of Asking for Forgiveness	54

INVOCATIONS AND SUPPLICATIONS

CHAPTER THREE: Transmitted Prayers whose Authors and Circumstances [of Composition] are Known and whose Use in the Mornings and Evenings and immediately after each Ritual Prayer is Desirable	63
CHAPTER FOUR: Prayers Transmitted from the Prophet and his Companions, with the Isnād Omitted and Chosen from the Collections of Abū Ṭālib al-Makkī, Ibn Khuzayma, and Ibn Mundhir	87
CHAPTER FIVE: Prayers Transmitted for every Emergent Occasion	105

Notes	125
APPENDIX I: Persons cited in text	135
APPENDIX II: Some important invocations	147
Index to Qur'ānic quotations	149
Bibliography	151
General Index	159