

CONTENTS

The numbers after the commas refer to the sections

| | Page |
|---|---------|
| XI. The Verb Stem with to | 279—311 |

Form, 215; functions, 216.

The verb stem in word-groups: in verb groups, 217; in adjective groups, 218; in participle groups, 219; in noun groups, 220; in groups with a verbal or adjectival abstract noun, 221; relations between leading member and verb stem, 222; the stem with to as dominant member, 223; groups with to have and to be, 224; the stem with to as nominal part of the predicate, 225; finite forms of to be as leading members of a group with a verb stem with to (arrangement, advice, destiny, etc.), 226; comparison between predicative stems (this house is to let) and predicative to be with participle, 227-228; verb stem with have, 229; connecting words, 230.

The verb stem in free adjuncts, 231; as subject, 232; in exclamatory sentences, 233.

Groups of a secondary subject and verb stem, 234; plain indefinite case (or oblique), with stem, 235; preposition groups with verb stem, 236-237.

Groups of to have and to be with a participle of occurrence, 238; to be with a participle of occurrence, 239.

Progressive stem, 240.

Verb stem and verbal ing compared, 241; verbs invariably construed with a verbal ing, 242; differences between verb stem and verbal ing when either form is possible, 243.

| | |
|---|---------|
| X. The Verbal Form in a Sibilant and the Verb Stem | 312—337 |
|---|---------|

The present tense, 244; actual present, 245; neutral and iterative present, 246; the present in sub-clauses, 247; the future-present, 248.

The imperative stem, 249.

The non-finite plain stem: form and uses, 250; the plain stem in groups with verbs that have finite forms only, 251; plain stems opening concessive adverb clauses, 251.4; hear say, make do, make believe, etc., 252; indefinite case (or oblique) with plain stem, 253.1-2; to feel, hear, find, see construed with a clause, 254.1-2; constructions with to let, 254.4; groups of be and have with a participle and a verbal ing, 255; plain stem in exclamatory sentences, 256; in free adjuncts, 257; plain stem and verbal ing compared, 258.1; character of the plain stem, 258.2-3; plain stem and stem with to compared, 259.

| | |
|----------------------------------|---------|
| XI. Number of Nouns | 338—367 |
|----------------------------------|---------|

A. Numerically indifferent nouns, 260; collective, material, and abstract nouns with a stem form, 261; collective nouns in inflectional -s, 262; class-nouns in a sibilant, 263; nouns in (mən), 264; names of nations in -ese, 265; names of animals, 266-268; technical use of stems, 269; grammatical use of stems, 270.

B. Class-nouns with two number forms, 271; vowel-alternation without a suffix, 272; softening of final opens, 273; compounds and word-groups, 274; compounds in -man and -woman, 275; compounds with man- and woman- for their first elements and appositional word groups, 276; groups of titles and personal names, 277; isolated plurals, 278.

C. Meanings of Nouns with two number forms: stems, 279; classification as material, abstract and class-nouns, 280; meanings of plurals, 281; different meanings as stem and as plural, 282; intensifying plural, 283.1; heap(s), lot(s) of, 283.2; collective plurals and plurals of variety, 283.3; of loose noun groups, 284.4.

XII. The Genitive of Nouns and Pronouns 368—394

Form, 284; uses, 285; meanings, 286.

Defining genitive: names of persons, 287; non-personal nouns and pronouns, 288; meaning in noun groups, 288.3; subjective genitive, 289; objective genitive, 290; group-genitive, 291; groups not occurring in genitive, 292; loose groups, 293; independent genitive, 294; predicative genitive, 295; post-genitive, 296; emphatic genitive, 297; names of animals, 298; nouns of time, 299.

Classifying genitive of nouns, 300-301.

Absolute genitive of personal nouns, 302.

Genitives of nouns and pronouns compared, 303; genitive and plural of nouns compared, 304; genitive and of-adjunct compared, 305.

XIII. Noun Stems and Plural of Nouns 395—402

General remarks, 306; vocative use, 307; indefinite case, 308; the stem in noun groups: attributive noun stems, 309; attributive noun stem and genitive compared, 309.8 ff; attributive noun stem qualified by definite numeral, 310; qualified by indefinite numeral, 312; numeral as leading member, 313; no alternative construction possible, 314.

XIV. Personal Pronouns 403—429

A. Simple Personal Pronouns 403—421

Forms, 315; uses, 316.

Personal pronouns of the third person: he referring to persons, 317; in classifying sentences, 318; in specifying sentences, 319; of animals, 320; of things, 321; she: of persons, 322; in classifying sentences, 323; in specifying sentences, 324; of animals, 325; of things, 326; it: of persons, 327; of animals, 328; of things, material, and abstract ideas, 329; in identifying sentences, 330; to denote a person as subject or object of an activity, 331; as formal subject and formal object, 332; they: 333.

Referring back to subject, reflexivity, 334.

Character of personal pronouns of the third person, 335.

B. Compound Personal Pronouns 422—429

Forms, 336; stress, 337; weak-stressed use, 338; strong-stressed use, 339; in loose word-groups with and, as, than, except, but, 340; to emphasize a noun or personal pronoun, 341.

XV. Interrogative-Relative Pronouns 430—448

A. Simple Interrogative-Relative Pronouns 430—443

Enumeration and uses, 342.

Who, forms and uses, 343; interrogative, 344; general relative, 345; anaphoric relative, 346; whom, 347.

What: functions, 348; interrogative, 349; attributive, 350; exclamatory, 351; general relative, 352.

Which, interrogative, 353; general relative, 354; anaphoric relative, 355; referring to a sentence, 356.

| | Page |
|---|---------|
| B. Interrogative-Relative Adverbs | 444—445 |
| Enumeration and uses, 357; where , 358. | |
| C. Compound Interrogative-Relative Pronouns | 445—446 |
| Whoever, whatever, whichever , 359; as general relative pronouns, 360. | |
| D. Compound Interrogative-Relative Adverbs | 447—448 |
| Whenever, wherever, however, why ever , 361; difference with no matter , 362; general remarks, 363. | |
| XVI. Demonstrative Pronouns | 449—463 |
| Forms and functions, 364; meanings, 365; deictic use, 366; anticipatory use, 367; anaphoric use, 368, at that , 369; affective use, 370; identifying this and that , 371; classifying sense, 372; determinative that and those , 373; such , 374; demonstrative adverbs, 375; so : general remarks, 376; referring to a sentence, 377; with vicarious do , 378; with to be , 379; so compared with it, that, this , 380; conjunctive so , 381—382; adverbial the , 383. | |
| XVII. The Definite Article | 464—491 |
| Forms, 384; uses, 385. | |
| Deictic article, 386; defining article, 387; anaphoric article, 388. | |
| Classifying article, 389; before geographical names, 390; before adjectives used as nouns, 391; difficulties of classification, 392. | |
| In word-groups with proper names: proper name as first member, 393; proper name as second member, 394; before groups of proper names with attributive adjective (the new China, etc.), 395. | |
| Definite article and reflexive genitive pronoun before nouns of inherent possession, 396—397. | |
| Absence of the classifying definite article: before abstract and material nouns, 398; before plural class-nouns, 399; before special groups of singular class-nouns, 400; use of the anaphoric or defining articles before such nouns, 401; use and absence before next and last , 402; before points and periods of time, 403; before proper names, 404; before personified ideas, 405; before groups of proper name and appraising adjective, 406; in enumerations and contrasts, 407; in close word-groups with proper name as first member (Buckingham Palace); in close word-groups with proper name as second member (King Edward, Lake Erie), 409; before adjectives used as nouns, 410; before superlatives, 411. | |
| XVIII. Indefinite Pronouns | 492—545 |
| Introductory remarks, 412. | |
| All , 413—416; any , 417—418; both , 419; each , 420; either and neither , 421; either and both , 422; every , 423. | |
| All, every, each, and any compared, 424. | |
| No , 425; no and not a , 426; none , 428. | |
| One , general remarks and uses, 429; numeral one , 430; particularizing one with proper name (one Mr. Molloy), 431; numerical pronoun, 432; anaphoric use, 433; as a prop-word, 434—437; | | personal one: three uses, 438; inclusive personal one, 439; determinative personal one, 440; personal class-noun, 441; stressing, 442.

Indefinite article: form, 443; numerical sense, 444; classifying sense, 445; unique class-nouns, 446; enumerations and contrasts, 447; use and absence before predicative class-nouns, 448—449.

Some, 450; some and any compared, 451; various, 452.

Compound indefinite pronouns, 453; compounds in -body and one compared, 454; compounds with personal one compared with groups of any, every, no, some and numerical one, 455; compounds in -thing, 456.

Semi-pronominal words: general remarks, 457; other, 458; groups with other, 459; each other and one another compared, 460; people, 461; thing, 462; things, 463; man, 464; affair, matter, person, 464.

Indefinite pronominal adverbs, 466—467.

XIX. Finite Verbs with the Plain Stem 546—581

Introductory remarks, 468.

Can and could, denoting capability or fitness, 469; permission, 470; manifestation of character, 471; possibility, 472.

Do: notional, 473; vicarious, 474; formal: 475; strong formal do, 476; in imperatives, 477; in questions, 478; without repetition of the verb stem, 479; in negative sentences, 480; weak formal do, 481.

Verbs not taking formal do, 482.

May and might, 483; may not and must not, 484; might, 485; can and may compared, 486; may and might in sub-clauses, 487; must, 488; as a preterite, 489; need and dare, 490.

Shall and should, weak-stressed to refer to future time, 490; to denote speaker's undertaking, decision, promise, etc., 492; to inquire after wish etc. of person addressed, 492.2; strong-stressed shall and shan't, 493.

Modal uses of should, 494; should reporting shall, 495; as preterite of concord in sub-clauses 496; other senses in sub-clauses, 497; in clauses depending on main clause expressing a personal feeling, etc., 498; general remarks, 499—500.

Will and would. Strong-stressed will, 501; weak-stressed will, 502; would reporting will, 503; in hypothetical sentences, 504; to express command, 505; to express probability, 506; to inquire after wish or intention of the person addressed, 507; to denote what is generally seen, 508; would and used to compared, 509.

Conclusion (summary, retrospect, character of the formal verbs, objections to the notion 'auxiliaries'), 510.

XX. Literary English 582—589

Distinctive character of literary English, 511.

Nouns and pronouns, 512; verbs, 513; indefinite case (or oblique) with verb stem, 514; use of the stem as third person singular present tense, 515; emphatic front-position of negative adverbs and consequent word-order, 516; conditional and concessive clauses opening with a preterite in the function of an irrealis, 517; do as notional verb not taking formal do in questions, 518.

Index 591—606