

CONTENTS

List of illustrations	ix
General editors' preface	xiii
Preface	xviii
Introduction	1
' A new play, never staled with the stage ': genre and the question of original performance	1
' An envious fever of pale and bloodless emulation ': historical context in the last years of Elizabeth's reign	6
' Wars and lechery ': demystification of the heroes of ancient Greece	19
' 'Tis but the chance of war ': sceptical deflation of Trojan honour and chivalry	30
' The gods have heard me swear ': tragic irony and the death of Hector	34
' As true as Troilus ': male obsessions about honour and sexuality	39
' As false as Cressid ': women as objects of desire	48
' Call them all panders ': voyeurism and male bonding	61
' What's aught but as 'tis valued? ': commercial and subjective valuation of identity and worth	70
' Divides more wider than the sky and earth ': the fragmentation of the divided self	79
' Stuff to make paradoxes ': performance history of Troilus and Cressida	91

ADDITIONS AND RECONSIDERATIONS	125
Performance and critical history since 1998	125
Critical studies since 1998	134
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA	143
Longer notes	379
‘Instructed by the antiquary times’:
Shakespeare’s sources	409
‘Words, words, mere words’: The text of
Troilus and Cressida	433
Abbreviations and references	465
Abbreviations used in notes	465
Shakespeare’s works and works partly by
Shakespeare	466
Editions of Shakespeare collated	467
Ancient texts	470
Other works	472
Selective bibliography, 1998–2014	503
Index	507