

CONTENTS

PREFACE xi

PART I FROM 1050 TO THE REFORMATION 1

1 THE GUILD: HISTORY 3

Role of guilds in Europe – general guilds (p.4) – craft-guilds (p.6) – modern assessments (p.10)

2 THE GUILD: ETHOS AND DOCTRINE 12

Craft-guild ethos: solidarity, honour of craft, justice – juristic opinion (p.16) – corporate legitimacy: Germanic and Roman views (p.18) – legitimation ‘by the law’ (p.19) – Innocent IV on legitimation by group will (p.21) – procedural values (p.23) – legislative competence (p.25) – Gierke’s and Durkheim’s views considered (p.26) – possible reasons why theorists largely ignored guilds (p.29)

3 CIVIL SOCIETY 32

Definition – economic development (p.33) – freedom of person (p.34) – security of ownership (p.34) – privacy, commerce, contract (p.36) – civil society and towns (p.38) – legal equality (p.40) – Cicero and St Paul (p.41) – liberty as a European value (p.42)

4 THE ETHOS OF THE EARLY TOWNS (COMMUNES) UP TO 1250 44

The medieval communes – range of governmental activity (p.45) – constitutions: assembly, ruler and ‘judges’; councils (p.47) – perceptions of the urban community: universitas (p.49) – procedural values: counsel, consent, election (p.53) – question of origins: (i) Roman (p.53) – (ii) Germanic (p.55) – town and guild: oath, friendship (p.56) – the politicization of the guild (p.58) – (iii) Christianity (p.59) – mixture of these three (p.61) – Investiture Controversy as sparking-plug: secularization (p.62)

5 GUILD POLITICS AND URBAN IDEOLOGY, 1250–1550 66

The political rise of the crafts – new and varied civic regimes (p.68) – urban values in later Middle Ages: community, ‘rich and poor’, friendship (p.68) – peace and common good (p.70) – conceptualization of the political role of guilds (p.71) – lack of corporatist ideology (p.72) – liberty and equality (p.73)

6 GUILD AND CIVIL SOCIETY IN MEDIEVAL POLITICAL PHILOSOPHY 76

The idea of civitas: Thomas Aquinas – values of friendship and mutual aid: division of labour (p.77) – values of civil society: personal liberty, rule of law (p.79) – law, not groups, as focus of moral values (p.81) – philosophers and jurists on guild rule and popular government: (i) democratia (p.82) – Albert on political equality (p.83) – Bartolus (p.83) – (ii) government by the community (p.83) – participatory consent (p.84) – the small group as model: Salamonió on contractual societas (p.84)

GUILDS AND CIVIL SOCIETY IN EUROPEAN POLITICAL THOUGHT

7 MARSIGLIO OF PADUA: A PHILOSOPHY OF THE CORPORATE STATE 86
Marsiglio's uniqueness – purpose of his work (p.87) – civitas and civil life (p.88) – functional 'parts' of the city (p.88) – natural division of labour (p.89) – state as corporation (p.89) – communal sovereignty (p.90) – ideology of commune as philosophical truth (p.92) – old and new classes in sovereign legislature (p.92) – interweaving of guild and civil society: mutual aid and exchange (p.93) – lack of influence on urban politics (p.95)

8 THE ITALIAN HUMANISTS: CIVIL SOCIETY AND THE REPUBLIC 96
The humanists as innovators – little on guilds: Patrizi on friendship (p.97) – values of civil society: liberty and equality (p.98) – Bruni on civic values and popular government (p.98) – equality of opportunity (p.101) – Machiavelli on equality (p.103) – civil society separable from city-state (p.105) – Machiavelli on participation and virtu vis-à-vis communal tradition (p.106) – from corporation to state (p.108)

9 GUILD AND CITY IN THE GERMAN REFORMATION 110
Manual work and equality of callings – adoption of Reformation in cities: role of artisans (p.111) – Reformation and communal tradition (p.112) – political and social reforms (p.112) – community and friendship (p.113) – covenant (p.113) – Jäger as guild ideologist (p.114) – German humanism and the city-state (p.115) – Jäger on guild rule (p.116)

PART II FROM THE REFORMATION TO THE FRENCH REVOLUTION 121

10 GUILDS AND POLITICAL CULTURE 123
Early modern guilds – in Germany (p.123) – journeymen's organizations (p.125) – guild ideas in the English Revolution (p.126) – in Germany (p.128)

11 THE PHILOSOPHY OF THE GUILD: BODIN AND ALTHUSIUS 129
Bodin on 'colleges' – affective groups (p.130) – friendship (p.130) – colleges and state (p.131) – Althusius on association (consociatio) (p.131) – solidarity and exchange (p.133) – communicatio and mutual aid: division of labour (p.134) – in city and kingdom: commerce (p.134) – the college as self-authorizing (p.137) – college and polity (p.137) – community and contract in Althusius' political thought (p.139) – Christian influence (p.140) – Althusius as corporatist (p.141)

12 CITY, CORPORATION AND NATION 143
Early modern cities – guild towns in Germany (p.144) – city and state: federalism (p.145) – German theory: Justus Möser (p.146) – nation-state modelled (i) on city-state (p.146) – Rousseau an exception (p.147) – (ii) on corporation: Gierke and Pocock (p.149) – free association and social contract (p.150) – Locke and corporation theory (p.151)

13 CIVIL SOCIETY AND THE STATE 153
'Possessive market society' – labour as a commodity (p.155) – contractual thought: oath and covenant (p.155) – Hobbes (p.156) – free trade in Britain: Adam Smith (p.159) – in Germany: Justi (p.161) – personal independence: Rousseau (p.161) – 'the equality of conditions' (p.162)

PART III FROM THE FRENCH REVOLUTION TO THE PRESENT 165

14 GUILDS AND TRADE UNIONS: THE ETHOS OF MUTUAL AID 167

Survival of guilds in Germany – the guilds and 1848 (p.168) – brotherhoods in Europe (p.170) – early trade unions (p.171) – question of continuity between guilds and unions, especially in Britain (p.172) – in organization (p.175) – in moral ethos (p.176) – solidarité (p.177) – mutuality in Proudhon, Herzen, Kropotkin (p.179)

15 THE IDEAL OF CO-OPERATIVE PRODUCTION 182

Co-operatives in recent times – artisan ideology (p.184) – theories of co-operative production (p.185) – J. S. Mill (p.187) – Proudhon (p.187) – Marx (p.188) – the political commune at Paris, 1871 (p.189) – participation (p.192) – voluntary associations (p.193)

16 THE ROMANTIC PHILOSOPHY OF COMMUNITY 196

The German problem – philosophical changes (p.198) – freedom in community: Eichhorn (p.198) – nation as community (Volksgemeinschaft) (p.199) – wholeness (p.199) – economic ethics (p.200)

17 THE PHILOSOPHY OF THE CORPORATION: HEGEL 202

Hegel's political philosophy – his notion of 'civil society': free division of labour (p.203) – the moral role of corporations (p.203) – their social, economic, legal functions (p.205) – corporations and the state (p.206)

18 FELLOWSHIP AND COMMUNITY: GIERKE AND TÖNNIES 210

Gierke on the Fellowship with a real personality – on the medieval guild (p.211) – on modern producers' co-operatives (p.213) – Gierke and Marx (p.215) – Fellowship and nation-state (p.215) – Tönnies on Community and Association (p.217) – guild themes in Tönnies (p.218)

19 DURKHEIM AND MODERN CORPORATISM 220

Corporations in modern political thought, as solution to industrial problems – as a genuine moral community (p.221) – functional representation in parliament (p.223) – Durkheim on morality and society (p.223) – 'organic solidarity' (p.225) – moral aspects of division of labour (p.225) – occupational groups as the agencies of professional ethics (p.227) – their specific functions (p.230) – Durkheim's place in the history of corporatist thought (p.231) – his relevance for today (p.232) – 'liberal corporatism' in recent practice (p.233) – lack of recent corporatist theory: dominance of liberal values (p.234)

CONCLUSION 237

APPENDIX: A NOTE ON METHOD 242

The history of ideas: paradigm, context – myth of coherence (p.243) – how can we know what people thought? (p.244) – causal role of ideas (p.245) – ethos, ideology, philosophy (p.246) – society and moral language (p.249)

BIBLIOGRAPHY 252

Primary sources (p.252) – Secondary sources (p.258)

NAME INDEX 273

SUBJECT INDEX 276