

Contents

Acknowledgments vii

Introduction ix

• PART 1 •

Narratives of Exploration and the Scientist-Hero

ONE

“I Saw Visions”: John Charles Frémont and the Explorer-Scientist as Nineteenth-Century Hero 3

TWO

“The Evidence of My Ruin”: Richard Byrd’s Antarctic Sojourn 32

• PART 2 •

Imagined Communities and the Scientific Management of Nature

THREE

“A Strange and Terrible Woman Land”: Charlotte Perkins Gilman’s
Scientific Utopia 57

FOUR

“A Unit of Country Well Defined in Nature”: John Wesley Powell
and the Scientific Management of the American West 80

CONTENTS

• PART 3 •

Nature's Identity and the Critique of Science

FIVE

"The Earth Is the Common Home of All": Susan Fenimore
Cooper's Investigations of a Settled Landscape 105

SIX

"The Relentless Drive of Life": Rachel Carson's and Loren Eiseley's
Reformulation of Science and Nature 134

Afterword 174

Notes 181

Bibliography 201

Index 215