

Contents

Figure and Tables	page ix
Acknowledgements	x
Note on Translations	xi
Introduction	1
Terminology: 'Saracens', Turks, and Muslims	15
Methodologies	19
Trans-Cultural Borrowing	19
Reality and Representation	21
1 Predicates	27
Latin Christendom on the Eve of the Crusades: Historical Background	27
The Lenses through Which Western Christendom Viewed Islam	41
Theological	42
Chansons and the Voice of Knightly Culture	56
Experiential Factors	65
2 The Launch of the First Crusade	67
Historical Background	67
Objectives	73
Urban II	75
Sources	75
Who Was the Crusade Launched Against?	79
What Was the Stated Purpose of the Campaign?	83
How did Urban Present His Enemy?	85
Participants: Intentions	94
Participants: Foreknowledge of the Turks	97
3 The First Crusade and the Conquest of Jerusalem	111
Encountering the Turks	111
Military Confrontations	113
Hierarchies, Culture, and Religion	120
Encountering the Arabs and Fatimids	135
How Important Were the Turks and Arabs to the Crusaders?	150
Conversion, Evil, and the Problem of Hatred	154
Conclusion	183
	vii

4	Aftermath	190
	Introduction	190
	Identifying the Turks	195
	Identifying the Turks' Allies	200
	'Chaldeans' and Descriptions of the 'Saracen' Religion	203
	New Information and Classical Influences	215
	The Turks and the Apocalypse	216
	East and West	226
5	The Impact of the Crusade	234
	Introduction	234
	The Military Situation, 1050–1150	236
	Islam's Place on Christendom's Agenda, Before and After the First Crusade	238
	'Saracens' in Medieval Narratives Written Away from the Frontier	245
	The Holy Land under Christian Control	260
	Crusading Fantasy	265
	Conclusion	268
	Concluding Remarks	270
	Bibliography	281
	Index	313