

Contents

Summary	4
Building shared governance arrangements across the local system	4
Horizontal networks between hospitals	5
Breaking down the silos within combined acute-community trusts	5
The impact of integrated care involving acute hospitals	6
The acute hospital of the future	7
Who will lead integrated care?	8
Implications for the NHS five year forward view	8
What should happen now?	9
1 Introduction	11
The case for change	11
About this report	13
2 The role of acute hospitals in integrated care	15
The focus and drivers of integrated care	15
3 Building shared governance arrangements across the local system	18
Working in partnership with primary care	22
Barriers to partnership working	26

4	Horizontal networks between acute hospitals	27
	The future of networking in the acute hospital sector in England	30
5	Breaking down the silos within combined acute-community trusts	33
	Stretching beyond the hospital campus through organisational integration	34
	Realising the benefits of organisational integration	35
	The limitations of organisational integration	36
6	Integrated service models	38
	Common elements of integrated service models	38
7	The acute hospital of the future	48
	Perspectives from our case study sites	49
	Scenarios for acute hospitals in integrated care	53
8	Making change happen	56
	A new model of leadership	56
	Regulating systems as well as organisations	58
	Providing financial support through the transition period (the transformation fund)	59
	Encouraging collaborative working between commissioners and providers	60

- ① ② ③ ④ ⑤ ⑥ ⑦ ⑧ ⑨ ⑩
-

	New ways of contracting for services	60
	Strengthening the workforce and redesigning professional contracts	62
	Harnessing data and technology	64
9	Discussion	68
	Who will lead integrated care?	68
	Moving towards the NHS five year forward view models of care	69
10	Recommendations	73
	Appendix A: Site profiles	76
	References	86
	Acknowledgements	89
	About the authors	90