

Contents

Translator's Note	ix
Preface	I
I. WHY SAVE THE BANKERS? 2008–10
Why Save the Bankers?	15
A Trillion Dollars	18
Obama and FDR: A Misleading Analogy	22
Profits, Wages, and Inequality	25
The Irish Disaster	29
Central Banks at Work	32
Mysteries of the Carbon Tax	35
Lessons for the Tax System from the Bettencourt Affair	38
Enough of GDP, Let's Go Back to National Income	41
Down with Idiotic Taxes!	45
Who Will Be the Winners of the Crisis?	48
With or Without a Platform?	51
Record Bank Profits: A Matter of Politics	54

II. NO, THE GREEKS AREN'T LAZY 2010–12

No, the Greeks Aren't Lazy	59
Europe Against the Markets	62
Rethinking Central Banks	65
Does Liliane Bettencourt Pay Taxes?	68
Should We Fear the Fed?	72
The Scandal of the Irish Bank Bailout	75
Japan: Private Wealth, Public Debts	78
Greece: For a European Bank Tax	81
Poor as Jobs	84
Rethinking the European Project – and Fast	87
Protectionism: A Useful Weapon . . . for Lack of Anything Better	91
Federalism: The Only Solution	94
The What and Why of Federalism	98

III. CAN GROWTH SAVE US? 2012–15

Merkhollande and the Eurozone: Shortsighted Selfishness	103
The Italian Elections: Europe's Responsibility	106
For a European Wealth Tax	110
Slavery: Reparations Through Transparency	113
A New Europe to Overcome the Crisis	117
Can Growth Save Us?	121

IMF: Still a Ways to Go!	124
Libé : What Does It Mean to Be Free?	127
On Oligarchy in America	131
To the Polls, Citizens!	135
The Exorbitant Cost of Being a Small Country	139
Capital in Hong Kong?	142
Capital According to Carlos Fuentes	145
2015: What Shocks Can Get Europe Moving?	148
Spreading the Democratic Revolution to the Rest of Europe	152
The Double Hardship of the Working Class	156
Must Debts Always Be Paid Back?	159
Secularism and Inequality: The French Hypocrisy	162
For an Open Europe	165
Capital in South Africa	168
A Crackdown Alone Will Solve Nothing	171
Index	175