

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction: Locating China in Noh: The Evolving Dynamics of the Other and the Self	1
1 The “Auspicious Other”: Celebrating with Chinese Deities in Seiōbo , Tōbōsaku , and Tsurukame	35
2 The “Sympathized Other” and the “Distanced Self”: Recasting Legendary Chinese Beauties in Shōkun and Yōkihi	59
3 The “Exotic Other”: The Spectacular China in Shakkyō and Ryōko	113
4 The “Destructive Other”: Threats from China in Haku Rakuten and Zegai	131
5 The “Harmonious Other” and the “United Self”: The Socially and Religiously Unified Chinese in Sanshō and Tōsen	151
Conclusion: Reinterpreting China, Reinventing China	175
Appendix 1: An Annotated Translation of Yōkihi	183
Appendix 2: A List of Chinese Plays with Selected Bibliography	199
Bibliography	201
Index	213
About the Author	219