

Contents

---

List of contributors	vii
Acknowledgments	xii
Introduction: human being(s) in international relations DANIEL JACOBI AND ANNETTE FREYBERG-INAN	1
Part I International political anthropology	33
1 Between fear and despair: human nature in realism ANNETTE FREYBERG-INAN	35
2 “Human nature” and the paradoxical order of liberalism STEPHEN J. ROSOW	54
3 Disciplining human nature: the evolution of American social scientific theorizing JENNIFER STERLING-FOLKER AND JASON F. CHARRETTE	74
4 The Marxist perspective from “species-being” to natural justice CHRIS BROWN	95
5 In biology we trust: biopolitical science and the elusive self DUNCAN BELL	113
6 Greeks, neuroscience, and International Relations RICHARD NED LEBOW	132
7 Constructivism, realism, and the variety of human natures SAMUEL BARKIN	156
8 Feminism and the figure of Man ELISABETH PRÜGL	172

	Part II International political post-anthropology	193
9	Realism, agency, and the politics of nature COLIN WIGHT	195
10	A global human condition MAURO J. CARACCIOLI	212
11	Imagining man – forgetting society? BENJAMIN HERBORTH	229
12	On the social (re)construction of the human in world politics DANIEL JACOBI	247
13	Observing visions of man OLIVER KESSLER	266
14	Who is acting in International Relations? JAN-HENDRIK PASSOTH AND NICHOLAS J. ROWLAND	286
	Conclusion: toward an International Political (Post-)Anthropology ANNETTE FREYBERG-INAN AND DANIEL JACOBI	305
	Bibliography	332
	Index	369