

Contents

Introduction	page ix
Chapter 1 Trade unions and wage inflation in the U.K.: a re-appraisal. D. L. Purdy and G. Zis (University of Manchester)	1
Chapter 2 On the concept and measurement of union militancy. D. L. Purdy and G. Zis	38
Chapter 3 A model of wage determination under bilateral monopoly. J. Johnston (University of Manchester)	61
Chapter 4 Empirical tests of a bargaining theory of wage rate determination. J. Johnston and M. Timbrell (University of Manchester)	79
Chapter 5 Excess demand for labour, unemployment and the Phillips curve: a theoretical and empirical study. G. C. Archibald (University of British Columbia) Robyn Kemmis ( Time Out magazine) and J. W. Perkins (University College of Wales, Aberystwyth)	109
Chapter 6 The relationship between unemployment and vacancies in Great Britain (1958–72): some further evidence. J. I. Foster (University of Manchester)	164
Chapter 7 Wage inflation and the structure of regional unemployment. F. P. R. Brechling (Northwestern University, Illinois)	197
Chapter 8 Wage inflation in the U.K.—a multi-market approach. R. L. Thomas (University of Manchester Institute of Science and Technology)	227
Author index	255
Subject index	257