

CONTENTS

|                                                                                                                                                        |       |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------|
| Preface                                                                                                                                                | vii   |
| List of Illustrations                                                                                                                                  | xiii  |
| Abbreviations and Works Frequently Cited                                                                                                               | xv    |
| Introduction                                                                                                                                           | xxvii |
| 1704                                                                                                                                            |       |
| Arthur Mainwaring, The History and Fall of the Conformity-Bill . Being an Excellent New Song, to the Tune of Chivy-Chase (January 1704?) | 3     |
| On the Greatest Victory Perhaps that ever Was or Ever Will Be by Sir George Rook . In Imitation of Sternhold and Hopkins (September? 1704)      | 15    |
| William Shippen, Moderation Display'd (December 1704)                                                                                           | 19    |
| John Tutchin, The French King's Cordial (December 1704?)                                                                                        | 43    |
| 1705                                                                                                                                            |       |
| A New Ballad Writ by Jacob Tonson and Sung at the Kit Kat Clubb on the 8th of March 1705 (March 1705?)                                          | 55    |
| A Health to the Tackers . A New Song (March? 1705)                                                                                              | 59    |
| Charles Darby?, The Oxfordshire Nine (April 1705)                                                                                               | 63    |
| The Tack (April–May? 1705)                                                                                                                      | 70    |
| Daniel Defoe, The Dyet of Poland, A Satyr (July 1705)                                                                                           | 72    |
| Daniel Defoe, Declaration without Doors (25 October 1705)                                                                                       | 133   |
| On the New Promotion (October 1705)                                                                                                             | 142   |
| Upon the Vote that Pass'd that the Church was Not in Danger (December 1705?)                                                                    | 146   |
| 1706                                                                                                                                            |       |
| Joseph Browne, The Country Parson's Honest Advice to that Judicious Lawyer, and Worthy Minister of State, My Lord Keeper (30 January 1706)      | 151   |
| The Lawyer's Answer to The Country Parson's Good Advice to My Lord Keeper (February? 1706)                                                      | 160   |
| The Country Parson's Advice to Those Little Scriblers Who Pretend to Write                                                                      |       |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                       |     |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Better Sense Than Great Secretaries: Or, Mr. Stephens's Triumph over the Pillory (11 May 1706)                                                                                                 | 165 |
| Matthew Prior, An Ode, Humbly Inscrib'd to the Queen. On the Late Glorious Success of Her Majesty's Arms, 1706. Written in Imitation of Spencer's Stile (5 July 1706)                          | 174 |
| An Epistle to Sir Richard Blackmore, Kt. On Occasion of the Late Great Victory in Brabant (20 July 1706)                                                                                       | 195 |
| William Atwood, A Modern Inscription to the Duke of Marlboroughs Fame. Occasion'd by an Antique, In Imitation of Spencer (12 September 1706)                                                   | 201 |
| Daniel Defoe, The Vision (27–28 November 1706)                                                                                                                                                 | 208 |
| John Hamilton, Lord Belhaven, A Scots Answer to a British Vision (27–28 November 1706)                                                                                                         | 221 |
| Daniel Defoe, A Reply to the Scots Answer to the British Vision (November? 1706)                                                                                                               | 227 |
| 1707                                                                                                                                                                                           |     |
| Daniel Defoe, A Scots Poem: Or A New-years Gift, from a Native of the Universe, to His Fellow-Animals in Albania (1–14 January 1707)                                                           | 233 |
| Jonathan Swift, Verses said to Be Written on the Union (1707?)                                                                                                                                 | 283 |
| Switch and Spur: Or A Seasonable Prologue to the First British Parliament (October? 1707)                                                                                                      | 286 |
| 1708                                                                                                                                                                                           |     |
| William Walsh, Abigail's Lamentation for the Loss of Mr. Harley. From the Greek of Homer, Left Imperfect by Mr. Walsh (February–March 1708)                                                    | 297 |
| Arthur Mainwaring?, A New Ballad: To the Tune of Fair Rosamund (February–July 1708)                                                                                                            | 306 |
| Arthur Mainwaring?, Masham Display'd: To the Tune of The Dame of Honour (February–March 1708)                                                                                                  | 317 |
| Joseph Browne, To My Generous Friend and Worthy Patriot, Harlequin le Grand. The Humble Memorial of Your Little Scribler, Spy, Champion, Closet-Counsellor, and Poet, Daniel D'Foe (June 1708) | 322 |
| William Shippen?, Duke Humphrey's Answer (July ? 1708)                                                                                                                                         | 330 |
| William Congreve, Jack Frenchman's Defeat (6–15 July 1708)                                                                                                                                     | 338 |
| An Epigram on Mrs. Deborah Churchill being Hang'd (December 1708)                                                                                                                              | 345 |
| 1709                                                                                                                                                                                           |     |
| Leviathan, Or, A Hymn to Poor Brother Ben. To the Tune of The Good Old Cause Reviv'd (June–July? 1709)                                                                                         | 349 |
| Matthew Prior?, Dr. Sacheverell and Benjamin Hoadly (August? 1709)                                                                                                                             | 357 |
| William Shippen?, The Junto (September 1709–April 1710)                                                                                                                                        | 361 |

|                                                                                                                                                                    |     |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| On Dr. Sacheverell's Sermon Preach'd at St. Paul's, Nov. 5, 1709. To the Tune of Packington's Pound (November? 1709)                                        | 367 |
| The Thanksgiving (November 1709?)                                                                                                                           | 372 |
| 1710                                                                                                                                                        |     |
| The Civil War (February 1710)                                                                                                                               | 379 |
| Found on the Queen's Toilet (February? 1710)                                                                                                                | 384 |
| A Tale of a Nettle (1 March 1710)                                                                                                                           | 387 |
| Upon the Burning of Dr. Burgess's Pulpit (March 1710)                                                                                                       | 392 |
| The Old Pack Newly Reviv'd (March? 1710)                                                                                                                    | 394 |
| To the Tune of Ye Commons and Peers (March 1710?)                                                                                                           | 403 |
| Fair Warning (5 April 1710)                                                                                                                                 | 408 |
| On the Queen's Speech (April? 1710)                                                                                                                         | 411 |
| The History of Seven (March–June? 1710)                                                                                                                     | 413 |
| The Save-Alls. Or, The Bishops Who Voted for Dr. Sacheverell (8 May 1710)                                                                                   | 422 |
| The Westminster Combat (9 May 1710)                                                                                                                         | 431 |
| On the Sentence Passed by the House of Lords on Dr. Sacheverell (1 June 1710)                                                                               | 439 |
| Daniel Defoe?, High-Church Miracles, or, Modern Inconsistencies (9 June 1710)                                                                               | 442 |
| Some Verses Inscrib'd to the Memory of the Much Lamented John Dolben, Esq; Who Departed this Life the 29th of May 1710 (June? 1710)                         | 448 |
| On My Lord Godolphin (August 1710?)                                                                                                                         | 452 |
| Arthur Mainwaring?, The Humble Address of the Clergy of London and Westminster, Paraphras'd (August? 1710)                                                  | 454 |
| Daniel Defoe, The Age of Wonders To the Tune of Chivy Chase (5 September 1710)                                                                              | 462 |
| Jonathan Swift, The Virtues of Sid Hamet the Magician's Rod (October 1710)                                                                                  | 473 |
| Jonathan Swift, A Dialogue between Captain Tom and Sir Henry Dutton Colt (9 October 1710)                                                                   | 480 |
| An Acrostick on Wharton (12 December 1710)                                                                                                                  | 487 |
| 1711                                                                                                                                                        |     |
| Daniel Defoe?, A Welcome to the Medal; Or, An Excellent New Song, Call'd The Constitution Restor'd in 1711, To the Tune of Mortimer's-Hole (September 1711) | 491 |
| Arthur Mainwaring, An Excellent New Song, Called Mat's Peace, Or, The Downfall of Trade, To the Good Old Tune of Green-sleeves (September–October 1711)     | 504 |
| The Procession: A New Protestant Ballad. To an Excellent Italian Tune (November 1711)                                                                       | 514 |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |     |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Arthur Mainwaring?, A Panegyrick upon the English Catiline (December 1711?)                                                                                                                                                            | 520 |
| Jonathan Swift, An Excellent New Song, Being The Intended Speech of a Famous Orator against Peace (6 December 1711)                                                                                                                    | 524 |
| Arthur Mainwaring?, The Queen's Speech. To the Tune of Packington's Pound (December 1711?)                                                                                                                                             | 531 |
| William Shippen?, The Character of a Certain Whigg (31 December 1711)                                                                                                                                                                  | 536 |
| Arthur Mainwaring?, A New Song. Being a Second Part to the Same Tune of Lillibullero (December 1711–January 1712?)                                                                                                                     | 539 |
| 1712                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |     |
| Arthur Mainwaring?, A New Protestant Litany (February 1712?)                                                                                                                                                                           | 547 |
| Jonathan Swift, The Fable of Midas (14 February 1712)                                                                                                                                                                                  | 552 |
| Jonathan Swift, Toland's Invitation to Dismal To Dine with the Calves-Head Club (26 June 1712)                                                                                                                                         | 560 |
| An Elegy on the Death of Pamphlets (September 1712?)                                                                                                                                                                                   | 570 |
| The Plotter Found Out: Or Mine Arse in a Band-Box. To the Tune of Which No Body Can Deny (November 1712?)                                                                                                                              | 576 |
| 1713                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |     |
| Thomas D'Urfey?, The Peace in View. A Song to the Tune of A Health to the Constitution (December 1712–January 1713?)                                                                                                                   | 585 |
| The British Embassadress's Speech to the French King (March 1713)                                                                                                                                                                      | 590 |
| 1714                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |     |
| The Country Squire's Ditty. A Ballad. To the Tune of To you Fair Ladys (April–June 1714)                                                                                                                                               | 599 |
| The Fall of the House of Stuart                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 603 |
| An Excellent New Hymn, Compos'd by the Priests of the Order of St. Perkin, For the Use of High-Church, upon Their Approaching Day of Humiliation, Being the Coronation-Day of His Truly Protestant Majesty King George (October? 1714) | 605 |
| A Farewell to the Year 1714 (December 1714?)                                                                                                                                                                                           | 612 |
| 1715                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |     |
| Pasquin to the Queen's Statue at St. Paul's, during the Procession, Jan. 20, 1715 (January 1715?)                                                                                                                                      | 617 |
| Textual Notes                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 627 |
| Index of First Lines                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 699 |
| General Index                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 702 |