

CONTENTS

PREFACE

vii

I. PRELIMINARIES: 1821-1840

1

Evidence of early neglect of Keats and reasons for it; Carlyle; Compensating factors, Landor and others; Influence on Hood; Browning's view of Keats; Decline of Byron's popularity; Interregnum taste

PART ONE

TENNYSON

II. KEATS'S DEBT TO TENNYSON

17

Tennyson's love of Keats; His attitude to other romantics; The reviews link them (1830-1895); Tennyson's fame

III. TENNYSON'S DEBT TO KEATS

22

Tennyson a derivative poet; Echoes of Keats; More general influence; Emphasis on Beauty; Twentieth-century appreciation of Keats's thought; Victorian attitude; Keats and Shakespeare; Self-sufficiency of Beauty an example to Tennyson; Their attitude to politics and nature; Medieval and mythological poems; Emphasis on art; Tennyson's later development

PART TWO

ARNOLD

IV. CRITICISM: HIGH SERIOUSNESS AND NATURAL MAGIC

51

Arnold's opposition to Keats's influence in Victorian poetry; His standards as a critic; Qualifications, the value of the "Celtic"; His distinction between Keats and Gautier; Contrast with Pre-Raphaelites; Keats's rank

V. JOHNNY KEATS

67

Arnold's emphasis upon character; Background of his essay on Keats; Popular misrepresentation of Keats's character; Milnes's Life of Keats, 1848; Its value; The Fanny Brawne letters; The tone of Arnold's essay; Final evaluation of Keats's character by later writers

VI. POETRY AND POETICS

74

Arnold's reaction against the romantics; Strong disapproval of Keats's style; The Preface of 1853; Baldness of his own poetry; Yet influenced by Keats; Themes of Keats's odes; Influence of style, The Scholar Gipsy; Other examples; Conclusions

PART THREE

ROSSETTI

- VII. CONFLICTS IN VICTORIAN TASTE AFTER 1850 93
 Rossetti's aestheticism fosters acceptance of Keats; Relation of aestheticism to Victorian scene; Middle-class taste, its origins and characteristics; Modifications and compromise after 1850; Ruskin as a transitional figure; Shift of taste extreme in Rossetti; Importance of the compromise in securing Keats a Victorian reading public
- VIII. ROSSETTI'S STANDARDS OF POETRY AND PROPHECY 107
 Keats and the Pre-Raphaelites, Holman Hunt; Rossetti as a leader; His appreciation of Keats; Indifference to contemporary scene, political, scientific; Effect on his attitude to Keats; His standards of excellence
- IX. KEATS'S INFLUENCE ON ROSSETTI 121
 Acquaintance with Keats's poetry; Confusion in the arts, The Eve of St. Mark; Rossetti's attitude towards literary influence; The Bride's Prelude and Keats; Other poems; The Blessed Damozel and Isabella; Use of wit and humour; Endymion; Use of words; Contrast between the two poets

PART FOUR

MORRIS, SWINBURNE, AND SOME OTHERS

- X. WILLIAM MORRIS AND HIS MASTERS 149
 Morris' strong likes and dislikes; Comparison of Keats with Coleridge and others; His originality, The Defence of Guenevere; Indifference to purple passages; Effect of Keats on The Earthly Paradise; Versification and atmosphere; Use and misuse of Endymion; Conclusions
- XI. SWINBURNE 164
 Swinburne's limited appreciation of Keats; His debt, Hyperion; Reasons for his disapproval; Symbolist tendencies; Songs before Sunrise; Keats's character
- XII. THE LAST DECADES 170
 Duration of Keats's influence among lesser poets, R. H. Horne and others; George Meredith; Oscar Wilde; Pater's view of Keats; Hopkins and Robert Bridges; Keats's fame in the Nineties; The Keats Memorial, 1894; The twentieth century

- APPENDIX 181
- BIBLIOGRAPHY 182
- INDEX 193