

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Introduction: From Personal Connection to International Collaboration Jill Brown and Nicola F. Johnson	ix
1. Theorizing the Cultural Borderlands: Imag(in)ing “Them” and “Us” Phiona Stanley	1
2. ‘A Picture Tells More than a Thousand Words’: Drawings Used as Research Method Eva Alerby	15
3. Walking in Two Worlds: Yolngu Children and Mainstream Australia Jill Brown	27
4. Being and Seeing Chakma: Constructing Self and Other through Images Raqib Chowdhury	41
5. Komi People through the Eyes of Children: Paintings or Photographs? Anna Podorova and Inna Makarova	57
6. Sámi Children’s Images of Identity: A Matter of Relations Gunnar Jonsson and Ida-Maria Svonni	75
7. The Past Is in the Present: Images of New Zealand Māori Identity Nicola F. Johnson	89
8. I Do Not belong Here: The Experience of Migrant Children in China Xuhong Wang	103
9. Imagined Baduy Children: Working with Parents and Little Time to Play Ahmad Bukhori-Muslim	117
10. Ainu: “Homogenous” Japan’s Indigenous People Sayaka Saito	131
11. What Do Canadian Aboriginal Children in the Northwest Territories Understand about Themselves through Their Drawings? Megan Blight and Michelle Eady	149
12. Images of Dreams and Hopes: Hmong and Yao Primary Students in Northern Thailand Dat Bao	169
Notes on Contributors	181