

CONTENTS

Introduction: Class Di_visions and the Cultural Politics of Serial TV	1
Sieglinde Lemke and Wibke Schniedermann
Part I (Di)Vision: “Lower” Class Televisibility	19
Framing Class, Vicarious Living, and Conspicuous Consumption	21
Diana Kendall
“Hillbillies,” “Welfare Queens,” and “Teen Moms”: American Media’s Class Distinctions	47
Diana Owen
The Paradoxical Class Politics in Here Comes Honey Boo Boo	65
Evangelia Kindinger
Reality TV and Its Audiences Reconsidered: Class and Poverty in Undercover Boss (CBS)	89
Tanja Aho

v

Part II Di*Visions: Screening Exploitation, Neoliberal Lies, and Class Realignment	119
Lifestyle Precarity and Creative Class Affirmation in Girls Eric C. Erbacher	121
House of Lies and the Management of Emotions Stefanie Mueller	143
The Financialization of Domestic Space in Arrested Development and Breaking Bad Julia Leyda	159
Realignment and Televisual Intellect: The Telepraxis of Class Alliances in Contemporary Subscription Television Drama Stephen Shapiro	177
Index	207