vii Preface: The Long Shadow

I. SLAVE TIME

3 Hark: 1831, Virginia / WILLIAM STYRON

A slave in a tree . . . From The Confessions of Nat Turner, Pulitzer Prize novel

39 Phebe / ROBERT PENN WARREN

A maid who saw what went on . . . "Many," wrote her mistress's lover, "cannot bear their eyes [those of black servants] upon them, and enter into evil and cruel ways in their desperation." From the Journal of Cass Mastern

II. THE NOT TOO DISTANT PAST

59 That Evening Sun Go Down / WILLIAM FAULKNER

Fear in the dark . . . "We left her there, sitting before the fire with the door opened, so that it wouldn't happen in the dark. 'When you all go,' Nancy said, 'I be dead tomorrow' . . ."

79 Nigger Schoolhouse / T. R. CARSKADON

A child in a circle

- 88 Arrangement in Black / E. P. O'DONNELL

- 102 Miss Cynthia / RUDOLPH FISHER
When they had "Redcaps" at Grand Central and Harlem was a place to play
- 118 The Finer Points / WAYNE GROVER
He had never known any Negroes in Greeley, Colorado, but in Washington, D.C., working shoulder to shoulder with Simson . . .
- III. SWEET HOME
- 129 The Gilded Six-Bits / ZORA NEALE HURSTON
"There was something happy about the place," explains this onetime faculty member of the North Carolina College for Negroes in Durham. But it was not a college she was writing about, but a simple human black man's home. . . .
- 144 So Peaceful in the Country / CARL RUTHVEN OFFORD
White man, black maid . . . as seen by a young black writer from Trinidad
- 154 Sweet Home / SANDRA TAYLOR
"My world is a good place," she wrote then—the time was 1962, and she was a high-school girl whose observations became a high-school essay award winner. Her ambition was to become an elementary school teacher and her "world" was Harlem.
- 158 On the Way Home / LANGSTON HUGHES
Human loss and youthful vulnerability
- 167 Sonny's Blues / JAMES BALDWIN
"And he was giving it back [in the blues, in music] as everything must be given back, so, that, passing through death, it can live forever. . . ."
- 206 The Black Sons-of-Bitches / JOHN ALLEN DAVIDSON, JR.
Variations on a term

IV. FROM "BIGGER" THOMAS TO PRINCETON

- 215 How "Bigger" Was Born / RICHARD WRIGHT
—and the nature of his environment
- 229 The Power Line Tapped / RALPH ELLISON
Prologue to Invisible Man
- 242 In Black Turf / EDWARD RIVERA
A "Spic in the pot": Confrontation
- 259 Black Again, White Again / JOHN HOWARD GRIFFIN
The man who dyed himself black to see what it felt like to be a Negro in the land of his forefathers—in a private cubicle . . .
- 279 The Negro at Princeton / ROBERT K. DURKEE
In-depth study of the problems and the challenges in a township that today has its first black mayor
- 295 Fallout: A Letter to a Black Boy / BOB TEAGUE
The popular broadcaster suffers from the "fallout" and feels guilty.

V. THE ELEVENTH HOUR

- 301 The Organizer / MICHAEL THELWELL
A Howard and Massachusetts universities prize-winning black author tells a story of a case of conscience in the South.
- 335 Harlem Revisited / CLAUDE BROWN
"Not too long ago, some junkies broke into my folks' house and stabbed my mother. I panicked. . . . I just forgot everything else in the world. All I knew was that something had to be done about it . . ." writes the author of Manchild in the Promised Land.
- 353 Niggertown / JOSEPH E. PUMILIA
Happenings in a black-controlled town
- 362 Zydeco / CHRIS FRAZER
After the burnings in the street

Contents

377 *To All Black Women, From
All Black Men* / ELDRIDGE CLEAVER

384 The Mud of Vietnam / JULIUS LESTER

"A part of me hates also. Sometimes, all of me, because they will never know, those young white kids, what it is like and I want to drown them in their whiteness. But, because they cannot completely know is no reason to deny them their right to humanity. They, too, are human and those I can love, I do and only hope that their numbers multiply with the rising of each sun. . . ." From Search for the New Land
