

|  |     |
|--|-----|
| Abbreviations  | vii |
| Acknowledgements   | ix  |
| Sensory Perception in the Medieval West: IntroductionSIMON C. THOMSON  | 1   |
| Heaven Ahoy! Sensory Perception in The SeafarerRICHARD NORTH  | 7   |
| The Sensory Cost of Remediation; or, Sniffing in the Gutterof Anglo-Saxon ManuscriptsJONATHAN WILCOX               | 27  |
| The York Mystery Plays : Exploring Sound and Hearingin Medieval Vernacular DramaMARIANA LOPEZ               | 53  |
| Birds and Words: Aurality, Semantics and Speciesin Anglo-Saxon EnglandERIC LACEY                                   | 75  |
| “Whistle While You Work”: Scribal Engagementwith Old English Poetic TextsSIMON C. THOMSON                          | 99  |
| Doing Things with Words: Language and Perceptionin Old English Riddles and CharmsVICTORIA SYMONS                   | 123 |
| Sight, Sound, and the Perception of the Anglo-Saxon Liturgyin Exeter Book Riddles 48 and 59FRANCESCA BROOKS | 141 |
| All that Glitters: The Role of Pattern, Reflection,and Visual Perception in Early Anglo-Saxon ArtMELISSA HERMAN    | 159 |

|  |     |
|--|-----|
| Taking Out the Eye of a One-Eyed Man and Other Hypothetical Moments of Sensory Impairment in Early Medieval Law                            | 181 |
| PATRICIA SKINNER   |     |
| Dis-embodied Cognition and Sensory Perception in Sólarljóð  | 195 |
| PETE SANDBERG  |     |
| (Re-) Viewing “ Iuxta Morem Romanorum ”: Considering Perception, Phenomenology, and Anglo-Saxon Ecclesiastical Art and Architecture |     |
| MEG BOULTON  | 207 |
| Plant Life in the Poetic Edda   |     |
| MICHAEL D.J. BINTLEY   | 227 |
| Index  | 245 |