PART 1 INTRODUCTION, TYPICAL SCENARIOS, AND HISTORY OF RESEARCH

1. Information Behavior: An Introduction	3
1.1. Introduction	3
1.1.1. A Bit of Vocabulary	5
1.1.2. Emphasizing People Rather than Systems	7
1.1.3. Ten Myths about Information and Information Seeking	10
1.1.4. When, Why, and Where Information Behavior Has Been Studied	12
1.1.5. The Contexts in Which Information Behavior Is Investigated	14
1.1.6. The Scope of “Information Behavior”	15
1.2. How This Book Is Organized, and How to Use It	16
1.2.1. Organization of the Book	16
1.2.2. Which Chapters to Read If ...	18
2. The Complex Nature of Information Behavior	19
2.1. Five Information Seeking Scenarios	20
2.1.1. Buying Products	20
2.1.2. Finding Information in a Library	23
2.1.3. Voting on a Political Issue	28
2.1.4. Healing a Patient	30
2.1.5. Curiosity: “I Want to Know More about Cancer”	33

2.2.	Summary	36
	Recommended for Further Reading	39
3.	The History and Focus of Information Behavior Research	41
3.1.	The History of Studying Information Behavior	41
3.1.1.	Origins of the Research Genre	41
3.1.2.	Reviews of IB Literature	43
3.1.3.	The Categories and Contexts of IB Studies	45
3.1.4.	Choosing Examples of Studies	49
3.2.	Summary	50
	Recommended for Further Reading	51

PART 2

CONCEPTS RELEVANT TO INFORMATION BEHAVIOR

4.	The Concept of Information	55
4.1.	Searching for a Definition of Information	56
4.1.1.	Explaining “Information”	57
4.1.2.	The Concept of Information	58
4.1.3.	Typologies of Information Concepts	59
4.2.	A Source of Much Confusion: “Information Theory”	60
4.3.	Five Issues in Defining Information	63
4.3.1.	Must Information Be Useful?	63
4.3.2.	Does Information Require Intentions?	65
4.3.3.	Must Information Be True?	66
4.3.4.	Must Information Be Physical?	67
4.3.5.	Does Information Require a Structure or Process?	68
4.4.	Must There Be a Universal Definition of Information?	71
4.5.	Distinctions among Data, Information, Knowledge, and Wisdom	74
4.6.	Summary	76
	Recommended for Further Reading	77
5.	Information Needs, Motivations, and Use	79
5.1.	The Motivational Puzzle	79
5.1.1.	What Is a “Need”?	80
5.1.2.	Needs versus Demands	82
5.2.	Four Scholars Ponder Motivations	83
5.2.1.	Seeking Answers	83
5.2.2.	Reducing Uncertainty	84
5.2.3.	Making Sense	86

5.2.4.	The Spectrum of Motivations	87
5.3.	The Trouble with Information Needs	89
5.4.	Information Seeking	91
5.5.	The Use of Information	93
5.6.	Summary	94
	Recommended for Further Reading	96
6.	Related Concepts	97
6.1.	Learning	98
6.1.1.	Information Literacy	98
6.1.2.	Information Practice	99
6.2.	Decision Making	100
6.2.1.	Making Decisions	101
6.2.2.	Solving Problems	103
6.3.	Unintended or Unstructured Searching	104
6.3.1.	Browsing, Scanning, Encountering, and Serendipity	105
6.3.2.	Additional Distinctions	107
6.4.	Identifying Relevant Information	110
6.4.1.	Relevance	110
6.4.2.	Relevance and Pertinence in Information Retrieval	111
6.4.3.	Saliency	113
6.5.	Information Selection	114
6.5.1.	Selective Exposure	115
6.5.2.	Emotion and Affect	116
6.5.3.	Information Avoidance	117
6.5.4.	Knowledge Gaps and Information Poverty	119
6.5.5.	Information Overload and Anxiety	122
6.6.	Information versus Entertainment	127
6.7.	Sharing and Collaboration	134
6.8.	Summary	135
	Recommended for Further Reading	136

PART 3

MODELS AND THEORIES OF INFORMATION BEHAVIOR

7.	Models of Information Behavior	141
7.1.	Models	142
7.1.1.	What Is a Model?	142
7.1.2.	Models of Information Seeking	144
7.2.	Examples of Information Seeking Models	148
7.2.1.	The Krikelas Model	148

7.2.2.	The Ellis Model	151
7.2.3.	The Kuhlthau Model	152
7.2.4.	The Byström and Järvelin Model	154
7.2.5.	The Savolainen Model	155
7.2.6.	The Johnson Model	157
7.2.7.	The Williamson Model	161
7.2.8.	The Wilson Model	162
7.2.9.	The Foster Model	164
7.2.10.	The Shenton and Hay-Gibson Model	165
7.2.11.	The Robson and Robinson Model	167
7.2.12.	The Freund Model	170
7.2.13.	Reviewing the Models	171
7.2.14.	Additional Models	173
	Recommended for Further Reading	175
8.	Metatheories, Theories, and Paradigms	177
8.1.	Metatheories, Perspectives, and Paradigms	178
8.1.1.	Metatheories	178
8.1.2.	The Research Spectrum and the Great Divide	179
8.1.3.	Perspectives and Paradigms	181
8.2.	Theories	183
8.2.1.	What Is a Theory?	183
8.2.2.	Levels of Theory	185
8.3.	Sources of Theory in Information Behavior	187
8.4.	Objectivist Paradigms	190
8.4.1.	Zipf's Principle of Least Effort and Cost-Benefit	190
8.4.2.	Uses and Gratifications	194
8.4.3.	Uncertainty Management Theory, etc.	199
8.4.4.	Other Objectivist Theories	200
8.5.	Interpretivist Paradigms	202
8.5.1.	Constructivism, Activity Theory, and Sense Making	203
8.5.2.	Social Constructionism, Practice Theory, and Discourse Analysis	206
8.5.3.	Phenomenology and Other Social Approaches	208
8.5.4.	Other Interpretivist Paradigms	209
8.6.	Mapping the Theoretical Influences on Authors	211
8.7.	Summary	213
	Recommended for Further Reading	214

PART 4
RESEARCH DESIGNS AND METHODS FOR STUDYING IB

9.	Research Design, Methodology, and Methods	217
9.1.	Relating Theory to Research Design	218
9.1.1.	Why We Need Sound Research Design	219
9.1.2.	Methodologies and Methods	220
9.2.	Basic Considerations in Research Design	222
9.2.1.	Stages of Research	222
9.2.2.	Inductive (Qualitative) and Deductive (Quantitative) Designs	225
9.2.3.	Rigor and Trustworthiness	226
9.2.4.	Purpose, Units, and Time	229
9.2.5.	Ethics in Research	231
9.3.	Examples of Methods	235
9.3.1.	Survey Methods: Questionnaires, Interviews, Focus Groups, and Diaries	236
9.3.2.	Experimental Methods: Lab-Based and Field Experiments	250
9.3.3.	Textual Methods: Discourse Analysis, Historical Analysis, and Content Analysis	257
9.3.4.	Visual Methods: Observation and Visual Analysis	264
9.3.5.	Studies Using Multi-Methods	266
9.3.6.	Meta-Analysis and Systematic Reviews	268
9.4.	Summary	270
	Recommended for Further Reading	272

PART 5
REVIEWING AND CRITIQUING RESEARCH

10.	Research by Roles and Contexts	277
10.1.	Occupations as Roles	278
10.1.1.	Scientists and Engineers	279
10.1.2.	Social Scientists	287
10.1.3.	Humanities Scholars	291
10.1.4.	Physicians, Nurses, and Other Health Care Providers	295
10.1.5.	Managers	304
10.1.6.	Journalists	308

10.1.7.	Lawyers	312
10.1.8.	Farmers	314
10.1.9.	Artists	315
10.1.10.	Other Occupations	317
10.2.	Other Roles	319
10.2.1.	Citizens, Voters, and the Public at Large	320
10.2.2.	Consumers	327
10.2.3.	Hobbyists	330
10.2.4.	Gatekeepers	333
10.2.5.	Patients	335
10.2.6.	Students	341
10.2.7.	Immigrants	343
10.2.8.	Other Roles	345
10.3.	Summary	345
	Recommended for Further Reading	346
11.	Reviewing, Critiquing, Concluding	349
11.1.	Reviewing	349
11.2.	Critiquing	351
11.2.1.	A History of Criticisms	351
11.2.2.	Changes in Methodology, Theory, and Impact	354
11.3.	Conclusions and Trends	359
11.3.1.	Ten New Lessons of Information Behavior Research	361
11.3.2.	Trends and Final Thoughts	364
	Recommended for Further Reading	365
	Appendix A: Glossary	367
	Appendix B: Questions for Discussion and Application	377
	References	389
	Author Index	475
	Subject Index	497
