

CONTENTS OF THE FIRST VOLUME.

I.

SPIRIT OF RATIONAL INQUIRY IN PROTESTANTISM.

A.D.		PAGE
	Complex character of the Reformation,	I
	Preceding spirit of religious inquiry—Erasmus, Colet, and others,	2-3
	Dogmatic character of Protestantism—Luther, Calvin, Knox,	3-10
1587 et seq.	Rational reaction—James Hermann or Arminius,	10-14
1618.	Synod of Dort—Simon Episcopius,	14-15
	Arminianism as a dogmatic theory,	16-19
	Arminianism as a method of religious inquiry,	19-25
	Three main directions of inquiry,	25-26
	Scripture,	26-30
	Creeds and Confessions,	30-34
	Fundamental and not fundamental articles of belief,	34-36

II.

COURSE OF RELIGIOUS OPINION AND PARTIES IN ENGLAND (1500-1625).

	Special character of the English Reformation,	37
1500-1536.	Rational spirit of the early Oxford movement,	38-41
1571.	Moderate theology of the Thirty-nine Articles,	42
1595.	Exceptional character of the Lambeth Articles,	43-45

A. D.

	Rational spirit chiefly displayed in ecclesiastical questions,	45
	The Sacraments,	46
	Orders,	47-48
	The Church,	49-51
	Hooker's Christian Rationalism,	52-53
	Growth of "Anglo-Catholicism,"	54-58
	Rival dogmatisms at the end of sixteenth century,	58-59
	The "Anglo-Catholic theory,"	60-64
	The Puritan theory,	64-70
1620-1643.	Rise of a moderate or liberal party,	71-75

III.

LORD FALKLAND—A MODERATE AND LIBERAL CHURCH.

	Question as to Falkland's character—Clarendon's sketch,	76-77
	His distinction as a scholar and liberal thinker,	77-78
1610-1629.	His birth and education,	78-85
	His early friendships,	85
1630?	His marriage—character of Lady Falkland,	87-90
	His visit to Holland and friendship with Grotius,	90-91
1632.	His retirement to Great Tew,	92-93
1633.	His father's death,	94
1635-1639.	Second retirement to Tew—Convivium Theologicum,	95-96
	Literary associates as described by Suckling,	96-98
	Selden,	98-100
	George Sandys,	100-103
	Carew and Davenant,	104
	Ben Jonson,	104-106
	Sir Kenelm Digby,	106-108
	Sir Francis Wenman,	108-109
	Sidney Godolphin,	109-110
	Edmund Waller,	110-111
	Suckling and "Wat Montague,"	111-115
	Falkland's Poems,	115-118
	Theological associates,	120
	Sheldon and Morley,	121-124
	Hammond,	125-126
	Earles,	126-128
	Chillingworth,	128-129
1639.	Falkland joins the Scottish Expedition,	129-131
1640-1643.	His political career,	132

A. D.	His activity as a reformer and speaker in Parliament,	134-136
	His speech on the bishops and Episcopacy,	137-146
	His acceptance of office,	146-149
	His despair of public affairs,	149-151
Sept. 1643.	His death,	152-153
	His personal appearance,	153-154
	His significance as the head of the Rational party in the Church,	154-157
	His "Discourse of the Infallibility of the Church of Rome,"	157-167
	His true attitude as a Church reformer and Rational thinker,	168-169

IV.

JOHN HALES OF ETON—RELIGION AND DOGMATIC ORTHODOXY.

	His general position—oldest of the Falkland group of divines,	170
1584-1605.	His birth and education,	171-172
1612.	Greek Professor at Oxford,	172
1618.	His visit to Synod of Dort,	173-190
	Gradual change in his opinions—"bids John Calvin good-night,"	190-191
1619?	Settled at Eton as Fellow of the College,	192
	Correspondence with Chillingworth,	193-194
	Suckling's lines on him,	194
	Friends at Eton—Sir Henry Savile,	195
	Sir Henry Wotton,	196-201
	Writings attributed to Hales,	202-205
	Charge of Socinianism,	205-208
1638.	Connection with Laud,	208-214
1656.	His sufferings and death,	214-219
	His writings—main principles expounded in them,	219 et seq.
	Dogmatic differences not religious differences,	223-230
	Church authority—Tract on Schism,	230-234
	Tract on the Lord's Supper,	235-237
	Fallibility of the Church,	237-242
	Essay on "The Power of the Keys,"	242-243
	His Rationalism,	243-252
	Value of his writings and services to Christian freedom,	254-260

CONTENTS.

V.

WILLIAM CHILLINGWORTH—THE BIBLE THE RELIGION OF PROTESTANTS.

A.D.	Chillingworth's prominence in the history of religious opinion,	261
1602-1628.	His birth and education,	261-262
1625.	State of religious parties,	263-264
	Aubrey's gossip about Chillingworth,	264-269
	Roman missionaries and Chillingworth's conversion to Romanism,	269-271
	His reconversion to the Church of England,	272-281
1635-1637.	His retirement to Falkland's residence, and studies for his great work,	281
	His growing liberality of opinion,	283-287
	His views as to subscription,	288-289
	Jesuit pamphlet attacking him,	290-292
1637.	'The Religion of Protestants' appears,	292
	Appointed Chancellor of Sarum,	293
1643.	Sermon at Oxford before the king,	294-295
	Present at siege of Gloucester,	295
	Taken prisoner by the Parliamentary army,	296
	Treatment by Cheynell—a noted Puritan divine,	296-302
Jan. 1644.	His death,	302
	Character and personal appearance,	304-305
	His great work—its position in literature,	308-317
	Its argument,	317 et seq.
	His disposal of the question of religious latitude,	333-340
	His services to religious freedom and Protestantism,	341-343

VI.

JEREMY TAYLOR—LIBERTY OF CHRISTIAN TEACHING WITHIN THE CHURCH.

	Results of the movement as so far described,	344-345
	Taylor's partial connection with the movement in respect of his 'Liberty of Prophesying,'	345-347
1626-1633.	His education at Cambridge,	349-351
1636.	His connection with Laud and transference to Oxford,	352
1638-1642.	His settlement at Uppingham, and treatise on Episcopacy,	357

CONTENTS.

A. D.
1643.	Driven from his parish by the necessities of the time, .	359
1648-1660.	Various writings,	361-365
	Evelyn and Taylor,	366-367
	His episcopate in Ireland,	368-370
1667.	His death and personal appearance,	371
1647.	'Liberty of Prophesying' published at a crisis, .	372-376
	Its tenor connected with this crisis,	377
	Its general argument,	377-380
	Nature of faith,	380-388
	Nature of heresy,	388-390
	Creeds,	392-395
	Remaining particulars of argument,	396-406
	Taylor's general position identical with that of Chillingworth,	406-408
	Beautiful apologue at the close of the work,	409-410

VII.

EDWARD STILLINGFLEET—THE IRENICUM OF A COMPREHENSIVE CHURCH.

	Stillingfleet's life not connected with the subject, .	411
1635-1689.	Brief account of it,	413-415
	His general character as a theological writer, . .	415-416
	Keynote of the 'Irenicum,'	416
1659.	Published on the eve of the Restoration,	417
	General design of the treatise,	417-425
	Two divisions of its argument,	425
	(1.) Natural law in its relation to Church government,	425-441
	(2.) Scripture in relation to the same,	441-444
	Neither Presbytery nor Episcopacy can claim an absolute jus divinum ,	445-460
	The ideal of a Christian Church,	462