

Contents.

	Pages
I. Introductory	11— 45
The Poet and the Critic	11— 19
General, 11; Eliot's two fields, 12—19; Limitations of his criticism, 13—17; His poetry, 17—19.
The Aim of This Book	19— 22
E's philosophical assumptions, 19—20; Form & matter, 20—1; Questions of principle, 21; Our purpose summarised, 21; The poet & the private person, 21—2.
Biographical Sketch	22— 45
Early life & family background, 22—6; Interest in literature, 27—9; Teachers & philosophers, 29—34; Poetic career up to 1920, 34—9; Later career, 40—3; Portrait of the artist, 43—5.
II. The Views of the Critic. Being a survey of Eliot's views on the Art of Poetry, as collected from his prose writings, with reflections on the subject of a Christian aesthetic.	46— 71
Early Criticism (—1921)	46— 51
Sensation & intellect, 46; Objection to personal Ideas, 46—8; Passion, 48; The poetic process, 48—9; "Impersonal theory", 49—51.
Later Criticism	51— 60
Material of poetry, 51—3; Form & matter, 53—5; Function of poetry, 55—60; Poetry & religion, 56—9; Poetry, language & culture, 59—60.
Faith and Aestheticism	60— 71
E's aesthetic & Christianity, 60—1; Maritain's aesthetic, 61—3; Kierkegaard's aesthetic, 64—5; Formal nature of beauty, 65; Is art edifying? 65—7; Autonomy of art, 67; Comparison with E's views, 67—71; Autonomy of art, 67—70; Noetic significance of poetry, 70.
III. Poetic Belief. Being an attempt to ascertain the ways in which ideas and philosophy may be involved in poetry	71— 93
The Problem	71— 72
Eliot's Exclusion of Belief from Poetry	72— 79
Early scepticism, 72—3; Flux of belief, 73; Poet's belief, 73—5; Aesthetic sanction of belief, 75—6; Reader's belief, 76—9; Poetic assent, 77—9.
General Discussion	80— 91
Reader's belief, 80—7; Richards's two kinds of belief, 80—1; E's two kinds, mutation, 81; All belief emotional,

81—7; Belgium's objections, 84; Modality of belief, 84—7; Modality & religious truth, 87; Truth-value of contents of poetry 88—9; Poet's belief, 89—91; Poetic belief & Christian aesthetic, 91.
The Question of Belief and Eliot's Poetry	91— 93
E's belief, 91—2; Reader's understanding & assent, 92—3.
IV. Vision and Mood. Being the first of three chapters in which we endeavour to ascertain the attitudes, views, ideas and beliefs which chiefly make up the "meaning" of Eliot's poetry	93—125
The Problem of Meaning in Poetry.	93— 96
Poetry autobiographical, 93—4; E's camouflage, 94; Sources & objectification of subject-matter, 95—6.
The Poet's Vision	96—105
Definition of poetic vision, 96—7; Importance of sense-perception to E, 97—8; Individual phenomena, unrelatedness of things, 99—101; Solipsism, 101; Search for connectedness, 101—5.
The Poet's Moods	105—121
Irony, disgust, 105—116; Loneliness, 106—9; Decay of civilisation, 109—110; Despair of metaphysics, 111—6; Determinism 115; Pessimism, 116—120; Buddhism, 116—7; Catholic disillusion, 118—9; Death-wish, 119—120; Sex, 120—1.
The Waste Land	121—125
V. Philosophy	125—148
Preliminary Remarks	125—126
Reality	126—145
Development of E's imagery, 126—8; Two planes of existence, 128—9; Bradley, 129—137; Sentience, 130; Self, soul, 130—2; Transcendence, 132—7; The Absolute, 134—7; Aristotle, 138—141; Form, 138; Soul & mind, 138—141; Action, 141; Time, 141—5.
Freud and Frazer	146—148
Psycho-analysis, 146—7; Anthropology, 147—8.
VI. Faith	148—172
Christianity	148—166
Sin, 149—150; Sanctification, 150—4; Effort, discipline, 150—1; Suffering, 151; Renunciation, 151—2; Penance, expiation, 152—3; Purgatory, 153—4; Submission, 154; Mysticism, divine union, 155—163; Dark night, 155; Revelation, 155—160; Grace, 156; Humility, 156—7; Closing of old accounts, 157; Incarnation, 157—8; Indeterminate visions, 158—9; Timelessness, 160; Soul, 160; Divine Persons 160—1; Paradise, 161—2; Communion, 162—3; Contemplation & altruism, 163; Catholicism & Protestantism, dogma & individualism, 163—4; Hedonism, 164; Puritanism, 164—5; Monism, Unitarianism, 165—6.
Oriental Mysticism	166—172
Allusions, 166; Brahman, Atman, Maya, 167; Metempsychosis, 168; Cycle, 168—9; Yoga, 169—172; Liberation, divine union, 171—2; Human effort, 172.
VII. Eliot's Synthesis. In which the three preceding chapters find their conclusion	173—188

	Pages
Correspondences	173—176
Pessimism, 173; Religious feeling, 173; Divine union, 173—4; Superstition, magic, 174—5; Reality, 175; Human nature, 175—6; Politics, 176.
Synthesis	176—181
Popularised ideas, 176—7; Oriental mysticism & Christianity, 177—9; "Religious poetry"? 179; Original & significant combination, 179—181; Internationalism, 181.
Four Quartets	182—184
The Poet and the Critic	184—188
Early phase, 185—6; Ash-Wednesday phase, 186; Latest phase, 187; Summary & discussion, 187—8; Pattern of ideas, 188.
VIII. Technique and Thought. An examination of the relative importance of the formal and conceptual factors of Eliot's poetry	188—211
Preliminary Remarks	188—192
Problem of form & matter, 188—9; Two pitfalls, 189—190; Conditions of drama & music, 190—2.
Texture, Rhyme and Rhythm	192—197
Structure	197—199
Imagery and Symbols	199—207
Precision & imprecision, 200—1; Development & force of images, 201—3; Imagery & meaning, 204—6; Form & meaning fused, 206—7.
The Wider Synthesis	207—211
Integral composition, 207—8; The wider synthesis, 208—9; Must form & matter compromise? 209—210; Importance of form to E, 210—211; E's poetry & Christian aesthetic, 211.
IX. Final Remarks. On the nature and significance of Eliot's poetry	211—223
Affiliations of Eliot's Poetry	211—214
Via media	214—217
Eliot's Importance To-day	217—223
In our spiritual & cultural situation, 217—219; In our literary situation, 219—223; Integrity of art, 220; Symbolism & allegory, 220; Modern poetic idiom, 220—1; Integral influence, 221—2; Christian & mystic poetry, 222—3; Modern art & philosophy 223.
Bibliography	224—227
Key to Abbreviations	228