

CONTENTS

1	Introduction: Fashioning the Unfashionable	1
	Allan Ingram and Leigh Wetherall Dickson
Part I	Ennui	11
2	‘[F]ictitious [D]istress’ or Veritable Woe?: The Problem of Eighteenth-Century Ennui	13
	Heather Meek
3	‘What is Fashionably Termed Ennui’: Maria Edgeworth Represents the Clinically Bored	33
	Jane Taylor
Part II	Diseases of Sexuality	55
4	The à la Mode Disease: Syphilis and Temporality	57
	Emily Cock
5	Dean Swift on the Great Pox: Or, The Satirist as Physician	77
	Hermann J. Real
		vii

6	Of Fribblers and Fumblers: Fashioning Male Impotence in the Long Eighteenth Century Kirsten Juhas	101
Part III Infectious Diseases		125
7	Fashioning Unfashionable Plague: Daniel Defoe's Journal of the Plague Year (1722) Hélène Dachez	127
8	How Small is Small? Small Pox, Large Presence Allan Ingram	145
9	'Halfe Dead: and rotten at the Coare: my Lord!': Fashionable and Unfashionable Consumption, from Early Modern to Enlightenment Clark Lawlor	165
Part IV Fashioning Death		187
10	Death by Inoculation: The Fashioning of Mortality in Eighteenth-Century Smallpox Pamphlets Kelly McGuire	189
11	Fashion Victim: High Society, Sociability and Suicide in Georgiana Cavendish's The Sylph Leigh Wetherall Dickson	207
12	'Alas, poor Yorick!': Jonathan Swift, Madness and Fashionable Science Helen Deutsch	225
Bibliography		247
Index		273