

Contents

| | |
|--|-----|
| Citation Information | vii |
| Notes on Contributors | ix |
| Introduction: reading and writing the economic present Emily Johansen and Alissa G. Karl | 1 |
| 1. The betrayals of neoliberalism in Shyam Selvadurai's Funny Boy Emily S. Davis | 15 |
| 2. Margaret Atwood's dystopic fiction and the contradictions of neoliberal freedom Chris Vials | 35 |
| 3. Neoliberalism and the limits of the human: Rawi Hage's Cockroach Kit Dobson | 55 |
| 4. Reading alongside the market: affect and mobility in contemporary American migrant fiction Pieter Vermeulen | 73 |
| 5. The banal conviviality of neoliberal cosmopolitanism Emily Johansen | 95 |
| 6. Managed risk and the lure of transparency in Anglophone African detective noir Matthew J. Christensen | 115 |
| 7. The zero hour of the neoliberal novel Alissa G. Karl | 135 |
| 8. Neoliberalism and the time of the novel Mathias Nilges | 157 |
| Index | 179 |