

Content

Introduction: Ecotourism and the capitalist crisis	1
1 Social natures	15
1.1 Limits of discursive power	16
1.2 Practice and the sociological bias	19
1.3 Practice as metabolism	25
1.4 Instrumentality and the nonidentical	29
1.5 On “symmetrical” theories	35
1.6 Discussion: Reflexive materialism of practice	40
2 Capitalist natures	45
2.1 Capitalism’s crisis	46
2.2 Ecocapitalism	57
2.3 Conservation as underproduction	64
3 Ecotourism	67
3.1 A short history of ecotourism	68
3.2 Integrating conservation and development	71
3.3 Operationalizing ecotourism	74
3.4 Linking ecotourism theory and practice	85
4 Recreational landscapes	87
4.1 Historical making of a recreational landscape	88
4.2 Current make-up of a recreational landscape	102
5 Ecotourism field of Laos	115
5.1 Tourism in Laos	115
5.2 The ecotourism field	117
5.3 Projects visited	122

6	Implementing ecotourism.....	133
6.1	Implementing structure	134
6.2	Distributional structure.....	137
7	Practicing ecotourism.....	155
7.1	Preconditions of host-guest practice	156
7.2	Formation of the tour group.....	162
7.3	The Nature part	164
7.4	The Culture part.....	173
7.5	Self-reintegration.....	190
7.6	Discussion.....	198
8	Localizing ecotourism	203
8.1	The indigenous project	205
8.2	The evangelist project	214
8.3	The conservationist project.....	219
8.4	The ecotouristic project.....	224
8.5	Discussion.....	231
9	Final discussion: The recreational frontier.....	239
9.1	Ecotourism as world-ecology	239
9.2	Crisis-ridden crisis regulation.....	244
9.3	Changes and continuities.....	254
	Conclusion and Outlook.....	257
	References	263