

Table of Contents

List of Maps and Tables	i
Abstract	ii
Overzicht	iii
Acknowledgements	v
Introduction.....	1
The Beginning.....	1
The Sheer Vastness of the Congo Basin	4
Looking in, up, and Sideways	12
A Brief History of Conservation in Central Africa.....	17
Conservation, Preservation, and Conservation, Again	18
Protected Areas in Central Africa.....	19
Conservation Today	20
Finding Present Day Conservationists	25
A Participant Observer	27
Why using religious terms and analogies	30
Theoretical Framework.....	31
Cognitive Anthropology: what they say, what they write, how they talk about what they do.....	35
Environmental Anthropology: Bases for contextualizing conservation	37
How cultural is "nature"	41
A historical approach to values and beliefs	43
Science and Subjectivity.....	45
Where to find tension.....	46
Research and analytical methods	48
Initial Hypothesis and Feedback Loops.....	49
Responding to, and incorporating participants' questions and ideas	53
Ethnographic locations	55
Ethics and Confidentiality	55
The Interview Process.....	56
Coding for Patterns and Comparing Texts	59
General Characteristics of "Real" Conservationists.....	61
Country of origin	61
Men and women.....	62
Roads to Damascus.....	68

Who is not a “real” conservationist?.....	69
The real conservationists.....	71
To be in or outside “nature”	74
Framing the current state of conservation in non-human versus local human interests, or animals versus bushmeat.....	78
Growing up in nature, relearning it in school	84
The narrative of scarcity from African conservationists’ views	88
Discovering nature when nature is “out there”	95
A “flash” that guides lives to conservation.....	99
The particular culture of conservation in the DRC	105
Visions of their community	109
Connecting through science and staying for the values	125
Bad conservation is about money and single species	130
Sacred Spaces and Rites of Passage.....	138
Conservation is about territory	141
The value of limits, outside and within.....	148
Speaking on behalf of wildlife	152
The prevailing nature-centeredness of territories	158
Human threat.....	166
Fieldwork is a rite of passage.....	170
“Nature was not wrong in orienting me towards conservation”	176
Separation, liminality and incorporation.....	179
Power and Control.....	188
The cost of coexistence	190
Someone like Jesus	196
Syncretism.....	199
Easy and uneasy science.....	201
Revelation	208
References.....	214
List of Acronyms.....	229
Doctoraten in de sociale wetenschappen en doctoraten in de sociale en culturele antropologie.....	230