Detailed Contents

- Preface: v
- Acknowledgements: viii
- About the Contributors: xvii
- Guided Tour of Learning Features: xx
- Guided Tour of the Online Resource Centre: xxii

Introduction: Diversity and Disciplinarity in International Relations Theory
Steve Smith

- All these theories but the bodies keep piling up: 3
- What do the theories share?: 7
- Diversity and disciplinarity: 9

1 International Relations and Social Science
Milja Kurki and Colin Wight

- Introduction: 13
  - The philosophy of social science in IR: an historical overview: 15
- Science, the fourth debate, and beyond: 18
- Exploring the key implications of meta-theoretical differences in IR theory: 25
- Conclusion: 30

2 Classical Realism
Richard Ned Lebow

- Introduction: 34
  - Classical realism on order and stability: 36
  - Classical realism and change: 42
  - Classical realism on the nature of theory: 46
  - Case study: classical realist analysis of Iraq: 47
- Conclusion: the tragic vision: 48

3 Structural Realism
John J. Mearsheimer

- Introduction: 51
  - Why do states want power?: 52
  - How much power is enough?: 54
  - What causes great power war?: 58
Case study: can China rise peacefully?  62
Conclusion  65

4 Liberalism  68
Bruce Russett
Introduction  68
Four big changes in the world  70
The 'epidemiology' of international conflict  73
Realist constraints  74
Kantian constraints  74
Analysing the global experience of a century  76
Are democracies peaceful in general?  78
A self-perpetuating system?  79
Case study: the European Union  82
Promoting order in anarchy  84
Conclusion: power, hegemony, and liberalism  85

5 Neoliberalism  88
Jennifer Sterling-Folker
Introduction  88
How did neoliberalism emerge?  89
What are the barriers to international cooperation?  92
How does neoliberalism study international institutions?  94
Case study: the World Trade Organization  99
Conclusion  103

6 The English School  107
Tim Dunne
Introduction  107
The interpretive mode of inquiry  110
International society  112
International society: between system and world society  118
Case study: human rights protection in a divided world  121
Conclusion  123

7 Marxism  127
Mark Rupert
Introduction  127
Historical materialism and meaning of dialectical theory  128
Western Marxism and Gramsci's theory of hegemony  134
Global power and hegemony
Case study: from Bush to Obama—US global power as twenty-first-century imperialism?
Conclusion

8 Critical Theory
Steven C. Roach
Introduction
The Frankfurt school
Critical IR theory
Later phase: universal morality and political economy
Empirical challenges and norms
Case study: the Arab Spring
Critical reflexivity
Conclusion

9 Constructivism
K. M. Fierke
Introduction
The social construction of reality
Constructivism and rationalism
Constructivism as middle ground
Consistent constructivism
Case study: the War on Terror
Conclusion

10 Feminism
J. Ann Tickner and Laura Sjoberg
Introduction
Gender in IR
Typology of IR feminist theories
Gender, security, and global politics
Case study: United Nations sanctions on Iraq
Conclusion

11 Poststructuralism
David Campbell and Roland Bleiker
Introduction
The interdisciplinary context of poststructuralism
The reaction of IR to poststructuralism
The critical attitude of poststructuralism
Understanding discourse
Discourses of world politics
Case study: images of humanitarian crises
Conclusion

12 Postcolonialism
Shampa Biswas
Introduction
Postcolonial theory: debates, preoccupations, commitments
Postcolonial international relations
Narrating a postcolonial IR
Case study: of Iranian negotiations
Conclusion

13 Normative International Relations Theory
Toni Erskine
Introduction
Normative IR theory: defining a distinct field of scholarship
Normative IR theory: exploring IR's implicit ethical assumptions
Case study: duties to 'enemies' and civilian casualties in Iraq
Conclusion

14 Green Theory
Robyn Eckersley
Introduction
The emergence of green theory
The transnational turn in green theory
The greening of IR theory
Case study: the challenge of climate change
Conclusion

15 International Relations Theory and Globalization
Colin Hay
Introduction
What's at stake in the globalization debate?
The semantics of globalization
The empirics of globalization: its extent and consequences
Case study: from the welfare state to the competition state?
Conclusion