Contents

Introduction ix

Part I Beginnings
I. Salzberger-Wittenberg

1 Hopeful and fearful expectations 3

The roots in infancy 7
Different kinds of hopes and fears 9
Anxieties about feeling lost 9
Hopes and fears in relation to teacher and institution 11
Hopes and fears in relation to the peer-group 13
External and internal factors which heighten stress 14
Those at risk on the point of transition 14
Factors in present relating to degree of stress 15
Interaction of external and internal factors: brief case illustrations 16
Beginning school 16
Difficulties arising from joining late 17
Difficulties of a first-year university student 18

Part II Learning to understand the nature of relationships
I. Salzberger-Wittenberg

2 Aspects of the student's relationship to the teacher 23

Introduction 23
The student's expectations of the teacher 25
The teacher as the source of knowledge and wisdom 25

The teacher as provider and comforter 26
The teacher as an object of admiration and envy 29
The teacher as a judge 30
The teacher as an authority figure 31
Transference 32
The concept of the transference 32
The continuous conflict between love and hate 34
Transference in the learning situation 35

3 Aspects of the teacher's relationship to the student 39

Introduction 39
The teacher's transference 40
Aspirations of the teacher 41
To pass on knowledge and skills 41
To enable students to succeed 42
To foster personal development 43
To befriend students 44
Fears of the teacher 46
Fear of criticism 46
Fear of hostility 46
Fear of losing control 47
Problems of which the teacher may be unaware 48
Hostility towards parents 48
Rivalry with parents 49
Identification with childish desires 50
Identification with destructive aspects of the students 51
Rivalry and envy of younger siblings 51

4 Emotional aspects of learning 53

Learning and mental pain 53
The containment of pain and learning from experience 58
Helpful interactions 61
Attention and observation 61
Openness and receptiveness 62
Having an emotional experience 62
Thinking about the experience 63
Verbal or non-verbal communication or action 63
Unhelpful interactions 63
Non-attentiveness 63
Excessive permissiveness 64
Reacting 64
Projection of pain into the dependent person 65

The basis of learning in infancy 65
Infantile roots of learning difficulties 70
Disturbances in taking in knowledge 72
Difficulties in digesting and retaining knowledge 74
Problems related to producing work 76

Part III Understanding the individual child in the classroom
G. Henry

5 Idealised relationships 81

Unreasonable demands 81
Idealisation of teacher and self 85
Attempts at polarisation 87
Idealisation and denigration 89
Comfort or development 90

6 Denigratory relationships 92

Intolerance of dependency 92
The gang as a protection against dependency 95
Envy as one of the driving forces in denigration 99

7 Helpful relationships 102

The hurtful child 102
The tyrant or slave child 105
The empty child 107
The patchwork child 109

Part IV Work with families and professional colleagues
E. Osborne

8 The teacher's relationships with the pupils' families 113

The range of the problem 113
The pursuit of facts 116
Co-operation or collusion? 118
Joining forces against a parent 119
Two sides of the picture 121
Influence of home versus school 122

9 The teacher's relationship with other professional workers 124

Special education 124
Medical and social services 125
The child guidance team 126
When to refer for specialist psychological help 126
Assessment at school 127
Making contact with a school 128
Rivalry 129
Anxieties about confidentiality 131
Labelling 132
Parents, school and clinic working together 133
Co-operation between teaching staff 134
The school as mirrored in the classroom 135

Part V Endings
I. Salzberger-Wittenberg

10 Different kinds of endings 139

Introduction 139
Transfer to another teacher 139
Conflicting emotions at separation 141
Holidays 144
Breaking up 145
Excitement and depression 145
Destructive behaviour 146
Post-holiday behaviour and feelings 147
The end of a course of education 148
The students' feelings at ending 149
Loss of opportunity 149
Doubts and worries about one's adequacy 150
Jealousy and envy 151
The teacher's feelings at ending 152
Loss of opportunity 152
Fear of wasted effort 152
Jealousy and envy 153
Loss of a relationship 153
Retaining something of value 153

Further reading 155