

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements

1. The Complex Nature of Adult Learning 13

Introduction 13; Learning and the Stages of Life 14; Sixteen to Twenty Years 14; Twenty to Twenty-five Years 15; Twenty-five to Forty Years 16; Forty to Sixty Years 16; Pre-retirement and Retirement 17; Age and Approaches to Learning 18; The Range of Adult Learning 19; Formal Learning 19; Incidental Learning 20; Categories of Adult Learning 21; Aspects of Memory 22; The Stages of Memory 22; Sensory Memory 24; Short-term or Working Memory 24; Long-term Memory 26; Analysis, Organisation and Recall 26; Some Influences on Adult Learning 27

2. Adult Learning: A Theoretical Overview 30

Theoretical Approaches to Learning 30; Introduction 30; Trial and Error Learning 32; Classical Conditioning 32; Operant Conditioning 36; Positive Reinforcement 37; Shaping 38; Schedules of Reinforcement 39; Negative Reinforcement and Punishment 40; The Gestalt Approach to Learning 42; Insightful Learning 43; Gagné's Hierarchical Model of Learning 45

3. Learning Cognitive Information 50

Learning and Organising New Verbal Information 50; The Analysis of Verbal Information 50; The Importance of Existing Knowledge 53; Meaningful and Rote Learning 53; New Concepts and Existing Conceptual Structure 54; The Learning of New Concepts 55; Concept Formation 56; Strategies in Concept Attainment 58; Relevant and Irrelevant Attributes of Concepts 59; The Organisation of Conceptual Structure 61

4. Learning Cognitive Strategies 64

The Process of Problem Solving 64; The Contexts of Problem Solving 64; Reproductive and Productive Thinking 65; Plans and Control of Behaviour 65; The Process of Problem Solving 66; Problem Solving and Set 67; Strategies for Productive Thought 68; Availability of Functions and Problem Solving 69; Functional

Fixedness 71; The Phases of Problem Solving 72; Problem Solving and Age 72

5. Learning Skills 74

The Nature of Skill 74; Physiological and Psychological Processes in Skilled Performance 74; Limits to Processing Information 76; The Skilled and Unskilled Performance 78; The Hierarchical Organisation of Skills 80; Closed-loop and Open-loop Control in Skilled Performance 81; Learning a Skill 81; Information Necessary for Skill Learning 81; Knowledge of Results and Feedback 83; Transfer of Training 84; The Role of the Skill Trainer 85

6. Social Learning 86

Influences on Social Behaviour 86; Social Groups 86; Socialisation 88; Affiliation 90; Values, Attitudes and Opinions 91; Interpersonal Attraction 93; Exchange Theory 94; Group Structures and Processes 94; Group Cohesion 95; Group Norms 95; Reference Groups 96

7. Personality Differences and Cognitive Style 98

Individual Differences 98; Intelligence 98; Personality 102; Cognitive Style 104; Convergent and Divergent Thinking 104; Syllabus-bound and Syllabus-free Learners 105; Serialist and Holist Approaches to Learning 106; Field-dependence, Field-independence and Learning 106; Impulsivity and Reflectivity 107; Individual Differences and Adult Learning 108

8. Individual Differences in Age, Experience, Motivation and Self-perception 109

Influences on the Willingness to Learn 109; Motivation 109; The Need for Stimulation 112; Differences in Achievement Motivation 113; Motivation to Study 114; The Self-concept and its Influence on Learning 115; The Origins of the Self-concept 115; Unemployment and the Self-concept 116; The Ideal Self: Its Origin and Influence 117; Ageing and Learning 118

9. The Social Context of Adult Learning 121

The Social Climate and Individual Learning 121; Factors Influencing Social Climate 122; Older People, Social Climate and Learning 124; Leadership and Social Climate 125; Effects of Leadership Style 127; Social Settings and Learning 129; The

Lecture 129; The Lesson 130; Group Discussion and Seminar 131; Tutorials 132; Role-play, Simulation and Games 132; Laboratory and Practical Work 133; Projects 133

10 Planning and Evaluating Adult Learning 135

Planning Teaching 135; Aims and Objectives 135; The Roles of Evaluation 137; Sequencing Subject Matter 138; The Relationship Between New and Existing Knowledge 140; Advance Organisers 140; Progressive Differentiation and Integrative Reconciliation 141; The Selection of Teaching Methods 143; Conclusion 144

Suggested Further Reading 145

Bibliography 148

Glossary 157

Index 167