

Forms of faith

Literary form and religious conflict in early modern England

Edited by Jonathan Baldo and Isabel Karremann

Contents

Notes on contributors	ix
Acknowledgments	xii
Introduction
A world of difference: religion, literary form, and the negotiation of conflict in early modern England – Jonathan Baldo and Isabel Karremann	1
Part I: Religious ritual and literary form
1 Shylock celebrates Easter – Brooke Conti	21
2 Protestant faith and Catholic charity: negotiating confessional difference in early modern Christmas celebrations – Phebe Jensen	39
3 Singing in the counter: goodnight ballads in Eastward Ho – Jacqueline Wylde	56
4 Romancing the Eucharist: confessional conflict and Elizabethan romances – Christina Wald	72
5 Edmund Spenser's The Ruines of Time as a Protestant poetics of mourning and commemoration – Isabel Karremann	90
Part II: Negotiating confessional conflict
6 Letters to a young prince: confessional conflict and the origins of English Protestantism in Samuel Rowley's When You See Me You Know Me (1605) – Brian Walsh	113
7 Tragic mediation in The White Devil – Thomas J. Moretti	126
8 'A deed without a name': evading theology in Macbeth – James R. Macdonald	142

9	Henry V and the interrogative conscience as a space for the performative negotiation of confessional conflict – Mary A. Blackstone	160
10	Formal experimentation and the question of Donne's ecumenicalism – Alexandra M. Block	182
11	Foucault, confession, and Donne – Joel M. Dodson	196
Afterword
	Reformed indifferently – Richard Wilson	216
	Index	239