

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Preface	5
List of Tables	9
1. The Problem and the Data	11
2. Single-Word Utterances and Grammar	16
2.1. Explaining the Transition to Syntax	16
2.2. Conceptual Relations in Early Sentences	20
2.2.1. Additional Evidence	24
2.3. The Origin of Sentences and Linguistic Theory.	25
3. Single-Word Utterances Are Not Sentences	32
3.1. /wɪdə/: The Archetypal Pivot	33
3.2. Successive Single-Word Utterances	39
3.3. Comprehension and Syntax	55
3.4. Early Prosody and Syntax	59
4. Developmental Change in the Use of Single-Word Utterances	65
4.1. The Distinction Between Classes of Single Words	65
4.1.1. The Frequency and Relative Persistence of Different Words	66
4.1.2. Referential Function of Single-Word Utterances	68
4.2. The Development of Substantive Words.	70

TABLE OF CONTENTS

4.3. The Use of Function Forms as Single-Word Utterances	84
4.3.1. The Use of "more"	85
4.3.2. The Use of "there", "uh oh", and "up"	87
4.3.3. The Use of "away", "a'gone", "no", and "stop"	89
4.4. The Use of Substantive Forms as Single-Word Utterances	96
5. Concepts, Words, and Sentences	113
5.1. Conceptual Notions Underlying Single-Word Utterances and the Origin of Grammar	113
5.1.1. The Use of Function Forms and the 'Pivotal Aspect' of Early Syntax	113
5.1.2. Conceptual Relationships and Early Linguistic Categories	117
5.1.3. Allison's Emerging Grammar at Time IV, Age 22 months	123
5.1.4. From Single Words to Syntax	130
5.2. 'Rich' Interpretation of Syntactic and Single-Word Child Utterances	133
References	142
Appendix
1. Methods and Materials for Video Tape Recording	146
2. Video Tape Transcriptions.	150
I: 16 months, 3 weeks.	150
II: 19 months, 2 weeks	179
III: 20 months, 3 weeks	206
IV: 22 months	233
Subject Index	258
Name Index	262