

Contents

Acknowledgements	5
List of figures, tables, and illustrations	11
1. Introduction	15
The Dutch Golden Age	16
Cultural industries	21
Spatial clustering	22
A dynamic analytical framework	24
Book structure and approach	27

Part I Publishing

2. 1580-1610: Window of Opportunity	35
The Dutch Revolt, an external shock	36
New publishers, new markets	39
New markets, new products	43
Business structure and strategy	49
Conclusion	56
3. 1610-1650: Unlocking Potential	63
Differentiation of demand	64
Book sizes and prices	67
Related and supporting industries	72
Conclusion	83
4. 1610-1650: Buzz and Pipelines	91
A polycentric urban structure	91
Local competition	97
Openness and embeddedness	107
Conclusion	120
5. 1650-1800: Mature Markets	127
Economic setbacks	128
International markets	129
A reading revolution?	132

Geographic distribution	135
Related and supporting industries	137
From production to distribution	142
Distribution and finance	144
Reproduction of skills and routines	151
Competition	153
Conclusion	158

Part II Painting

6. 1580-1610: A Period of Transition	169
Expansion of the art market	170
Spatial clustering and the impact of immigration	172
Measuring artistic prominence	177
Prominence in Dutch painting	179
Styles, genres, and ties with related industries	183
Conclusion	186
7. 1610-1650: Unlocking Potential	193
Golden Age painting	193
From large potential to real consumption	195
Artistic novelties of the 1610s and 1620s	196
Product and process innovations	200
The invisible hand of supply and demand	202
Competition	203
Conclusion	211
8. 1610-1650: Buzz and Pipelines	215
Geography of production	216
Quality and quantity	222
Spin-offs and spillovers	225
Institutional organization	230
Distribution	236
Conclusion	239
9. 1650-1800: Mature Markets	245
The downturn in the art market	246
Geographic distribution	249
Artistic decline	252

Artists' strategies	253
Luxury and elegance	254
Institutional organization	264
Conclusion	274
10. Conclusion	283
The life cycles of painting and publishing	283
Painting and publishing as cultural industries	287
Spatial clustering as an explanatory framework	292
Creative flames and golden ages	294
Appendix 1. Methods and Data	297
Sources and Bibliography	307
Index	337