

CONTENTS

Foreword	EDWIN A. FLEISHMAN	Page x
Preface		xi
1: INTRODUCTION		1
- Task groups and the social system at work: A disaster case compared with a success story
- Group life cycle makes a difference
- The manager often is the key
2: THE MANAGER'S PART IN GROUP PROCESS		7
- How managers gain acceptance by their groups
- Assessing managers and their performance
- Managerial functions - The content of the job
- Office automation impact on managerial work
- Taking stock
3: FROM BIRTH TO RESURRECTION: A MODEL FOR GROUP DEVELOPMENT		32
- Why a life cycle model is important
- Applying the model to a hypothetical case
- Why the manager must understand a work group's history
4: HOW GROUPS AFFECT THEIR MEMBERS		48
- Cohesion as the human glue
- Conformity pressures - good or bad?
- Group influences on member attitudes and beliefs start early
- How and why group performance standards evolve
- How groups influence work related habits
- How groups influence prejudices
- How groups influence individual member work effectiveness
- How groups get their members to conform
- Multiple-group membership and conflicting loyalties
- Summary of group conformity pressure effects
- Implications for managers

5: THE MATURE WORK GROUP

66

- The group's structure
- How the membership mix affects cohesion
- Importance of group's overall status in organization
- Group size, job satisfaction, and cohesion
- Why small is better
- Group physical boundaries and cohesion
- Group psychological boundaries and cohesion
- Communication patterns and cohesion
- The participation principle
- Unique vocabulary and cohesion
- Productivity is limited by group process
- The group's informal contract
- Reasons for process loss
- Implications for managing change

6: STRESS, STRAIN, AND CONFLICT: BY-PRODUCTS OF GROUP PROCESS

84

- Sources of employee frustration
- Consequences of stress
- Stress analysis applies to groups, too
- Factors influencing reactions to stress
- Competition and conflict
- Constructive vs. destructive conflict
- Spontaneous vs. planned competition between groups
- The intergroup conflict escalation process
- Stress and group development: The practical side

7: MOTIVATION IN TASK GROUPS

103

- Goal setting and knowledge of results as motivational processes
- A useful model for understanding goal setting
- Hard to achieve goals
- Success as a motivator
- Converting failure into success
- The pros and cons of competition as a motivational strategy
- Application to the team building process

8: RECOGNITION AND REWARDS

127

- Money as a motivator
- How groups filter the money motive
- Organization-wide incentive systems
- Some unintended consequences of financial reward systems: three mini-cases
- Promotion to supervisor as a motivator: A mixed bag
- Performance appraisal as a motivational tool: Something is missing
- The performance appraisal-salary link
- The shape of the curve
- Implications for managing through groups

9: TASK ATTRIBUTES, CHALLENGE, AND GROUP DEVELOPMENT

149

- Examples of presumably meaningless work
- Unanswered or partially answered questions
- Analysis of meaningless work interviews
- Task impact on groups
- The influence of time on the nature of a group's task - a model
- Some implications for managers

10: PARTICIPATION IN DECISION MAKING (PDM)

169

- PDM as a group process lubricant
- Some descriptive dimensions of PDM
- Participation in goal setting - Research results
- Autonomous work groups
- Why autonomous groups seem to work
- Unresolved issues
- Resistance to participation
- Who the participators are
- Quality Circles: Why many seem to work
- The rescheduling of working hours
- Flexitime advantages to employees - in principle
- What experienced flexitime employees say
- Flexitime benefits to the employer
- Reasons why flexitime works
- Some caveats
- Implications of PDM for team building

11: THE RENEWAL PROCESS

194

Part I: Rebuilding Task Groups

- Reasons for stagnation revisited
- Group renewal tactics

PART II: Renewing The Organization

- Two managerial ironies of World War II
- Enter the human relations movement
- A review of Theories X and Y
- Enter Theory Z
- The return to the ABCs of management
- The ABCs in Cuba and Russia
- Why the ABCs will be costly in the long run
- A new challenge on the horizon
- Deterioration in the US society
- Education and training is a key problem area
- Toward the development of Model T
- Building a local sense of purpose

Appendix A: THE TASK GROUP EFFECTIVENESS INVENTORY	216
Appendix B: MCGREGOR'S TWO FACTOR THEORY - REVISED	221
Author Index	222
Subject Index	225