

Contents

---

Contributors	vii
Introduction: New Critical Thinking – To Read so as to Become Acquainted Julian Wolfreys	I
1 Turnings and Re-Turnings Mary Ann Caws	15
2 ‘Peering into the dark machinery’: Modernity, Perception and the Self in John Burnside’s Poetry Monika Szuba	23
3 Modernity’s Sylvan Subjectivity, from Gainsborough to Gallaccio Catherine Bernard	36
4 Little Did They Know: Toward an Experiential Approach to the Theory of History Sarah Pardon	50
5 ‘The Heart cannot forget / Unless it contemplate / What it declines’: Emily Dickinson, Frank Ankersmit and the Art of Forgetting Páraic Finnerty	76
6 Reading Microhistory: Three Layers of Meaning Anton Froeyman	99
7 Writing Fiction, Making History: Historical Narrative and the Process of Creating History Christine Berberich	123
8 Witnessing, Recognition and Response Ethics Kelly Oliver	140
9 A Norwegian Abroad: Camilla Collett’s Travelogues from Berlin and Paris Tone Selboe	158

10	Alfred Jarry's Nietzschean Modernism Jean-Michel Rabaté	167
11	On First Looking into Derrida's Glas J. Hillis Miller	176
12	'A very black and little Arab Jew': Experience and Experimentation or, Two Words for Jacques Derrida Julian Wolfreys	195
	Index	209