

Contents

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction: Historicizing and Internationalizing
the “Baadasssss” or Imagining Cinematic Reparation i

Part I “We Return Fighting”: The Integration of Hollywood and the Reconstruction of Black Representation

1 The Black Soldier and His Colonial Other 27

2 Resounding Blackness: Liveness and the Reprisal of Black Performance in Stormy Weather 57

3 Remembering the Men: Black Audience Propaganda and the Reconstruction of the Black Public Sphere 83

Part II “Fugitive Movements”: Black Resistance, Exile, and the Rise of Black Independent Cinema

4 Psychic Seditions: Black Interiority, Black Death, and the Mise-en-Scène of Resistance in Cold War Cinema 121

5 Toward a Black Transnational Cinema:
Melvin Van Peebles and the Soldier 157

6	The Last Black Soldier: Performing Revolution in The Spook Who Sat by the Door	183
	Conclusion: After Images	210
	Notes	219
	Selected Bibliography	253
	Index	261