

Contents

Preface		ix
PART ONE: INTRODUCTION
Chapter 1 Introduction		1
	Bruce Christie and John McEwan
	The Key Role of Communications in Human Life	2
	The Information Technology Market	3
	National and International Initiatives	6
	The Front Line: The User–system Interface	11
	The Nature of Systems Psychology	15
	Scope of the Book	18
	Complementary Books	23
Chapter 2 The Office: A Psychological Perspective		24
	Bruce Christie and M. Polly Kaiser
	Introduction	24
	The Organizational Context	26
	The User	39
	Conclusions	56
Chapter 3 The Office: A Historical Perspective		57
	Jack Field
	Introduction	57
	The First Offices	57
	Two Office Revolutions	59
	Conclusions	72
PART TWO: PRODUCT TRENDS
Chapter 4 Overview		75
	Bruce Christie
	Introduction	75
	Type A—Person to Person—Communication	76
	Type B—Person to ‘Paper’ to Person— Communication	80

	Type C—Person to ‘Intelligent’ Machine— Communication	87
	Integration at the User Interface	88
	The 1983 Office System Scenario	89
	The Future	95
	Conclusions	96
Chapter 5	Electronic Meetings	97
	Bruce Christie and Marco de Alberdi
	Introduction	97
	Types of Meetings	102
	Effects of Media	105
	Users’ Attitudes	120
	Conclusions	125
Chapter 6	Personal Information Systems	127
	Bruce Christie
	Introduction	127
	Some General Psychological Principles	128
	Some Characteristics of Paper-based Systems	133
	Advantages of Paper-based Systems	135
	Early Steps Towards More Effective Electronic Environments	137
	Hypotheses and conclusions	143
Chapter 7	Shared Information Systems	145
	Bruce Christie
	Introduction	145
	Identifying a Need for Information	146
	Formulating the Need	149
	Selecting a Source	153
	Using Online Systems	156
	The Emergence of Videotex	161
	Beyond Current Systems: Intelligence Applied to Relevance	163
	Conclusions	168
Chapter 8	Decision Systems	170
	Marco de Alberdi and James Harvey
	Introduction	170
	Decision Types and Processes	171
	Key Roles in Decision Making	174
	A Computer Based Model of Knowledge Rich Decision Making	181
	Conclusions	185

PART THREE: PRODUCT USABILITY

Chapter 9	Assessing Product Usability: A Psychophysiological Approach	189
	Anthony Gale
	Introduction	190
	Physiological Measures and Criteria for Their Use in Applied Contexts	192
	The Psychological Significance of Some Key Measures	194
	Studies of Work Stress	202
	Psychophysiology and the VDU	205
	Concepts of Information Processing	206
	Psychophysiology, General Systems Theory, and Situated Action Theory	208
	Conclusions	211
Chapter 10	Dialogue Design Guidelines	212
	Ian Cole, Mark Lansdale and Bruce Christie
	Introduction	212
	User Requirements	214
	Selecting an Appropriate Type of Dialogue	217
	Guidelines for Input to the System	223
	Guidelines for Input to the User	228
	Guidelines for Facilitating User–system ‘Meshing’	234
	Bibliography	239
Chapter 11	Beyond Dialogue Design Guidelines: The Role of Mental Models	242
	Mark Lansdale
	Introduction	242
	Conceptual Representations	250
	Implied Dialogue Models—Cognitive Factors in Command Languages	259
	Cognitive Models	266
	Conclusions	270

PART FOUR: INTRODUCING SYSTEMS INTO ORGANIZATIONS

Chapter 12	Introducing Office Systems: Guidelines and Impacts	273
	Bruce Christie
	Introduction	273
	Guidelines	273

	Impacts	286
	Conclusions	296
Chapter 13	Identifying Future Office Systems: A Framework for a New Methodology	297
	Jack Field
	Introduction: Brakes on Progress	297
	A Framework for a New Methodology	300
	Conclusions	311
PART FIVE: CONCLUSIONS
Chapter 14	Conclusions	315
	Bruce Christie and John McEwan
	Introduction	315
	Product Trends	318
	Product Usability	322
	Introducing Systems into Organizations	324
	Conclusions	325
	References	326
	Author Index	341
	Subject Index	347