

Contents

Acknowledgments vii

Introduction i

1. The Physiognomy of American Labor:
Photography and Employee Rationalization 23
2. Industrial Choreography: Photography and the Standardization of Motion 65
3. Engineering the Subjective: Lewis W. Hine's
Work Portraits and Corporate Paternalism
in the 1920s 119
4. Rationalizing Consumption: Photography and Commercial Illustration 159

Conclusion 217

Notes 221 Selected Bibliography 297

Index 321