

Table of contents

List of contributors	IX
Acknowledgements	XI

Part I. Introduction

CHAPTER 1

Fictive interaction and the conversation frame: An overview Esther Pascual and Sergey Sandler	3
---	---

CHAPTER 2

Fictive interaction and the nature of linguistic meaning Sergeiy Sandler	23
--	----

Part II. Fictive interaction as cognitive reality

CHAPTER 3

Generic integration templates for fictive communication Cristóbal Pagán Cánovas and Mark Turner	45
---	----

CHAPTER 4

Real, imaginary, or fictive? Philosophical dialogues in an early Daoist text and its pictorial version Mingjian Xiang	63
--	----

CHAPTER 5

Silent abstractions versus “ Look at me ” drawings: Corpus evidence that artworks’ subject matter affects their fictive speech Karen Sullivan	87
--	----

Part III. Fictive interaction as discourse structure

CHAPTER 6

Persuading and arguing with the reader: Fictive interaction as discourse organizing device in witchcraft pamphlet prefaces (1566–1621) Krisda Chaemsaithong	113
--	-----

CHAPTER 7
Invocation or apostrophe? Prayer and the conversation frame in public discourse		131
	William FitzGerald and Todd Oakley
CHAPTER 8
On discourse-motivated “sorries”: Fictive apologies in English, Hungarian, and Romanian		151
	Gusztav Demeter
Part IV. Fictive interaction as linguistic construction
CHAPTER 9
What about? Fictive question-answer pairs for non-information-seeking functions across signed languages		171
	Maria Josep Jarque
CHAPTER 10
Fictive questions in conditionals? Synchronic and diachronic evidence from German and English		193
	Torsten Leuschner
CHAPTER 11
Intonation of fictive vs. actual direct speech in a Brazilian Portuguese corpus		215
	Luiz Fernando Matos Rocha and Pablo Arantes
CHAPTER 12
A Polish nominal construction involving fictive interaction: Its scope and functions in discourse		235
	Emilia Królak
CHAPTER 13
Evidential fictive interaction (in Ungarinyin and Russian)		255
	Stef Spronck
CHAPTER 14
Recursive inflection and grammaticalized fictive interaction in the southwestern Amazon		277
	Hein van der Voort

Part V. Fictive interaction as communicative strategy

CHAPTER 15

“Say hello to this ad”: The persuasive rhetoric of fictive interaction in marketing 303

Line Brandt and Esther Pascual

CHAPTER 16

The use of interactive structures as communicative strategy in Dutch and Portuguese aphasic speakers 323

Christine Versluis and Lou-Ann Kleppa

CHAPTER 17

Echolalia as communicative strategy: Fictive interaction in the speech of children with autism 343

Aline Dornelas and Esther Pascual

About the contributors 363

Author index 369

Language index 375

Subject index 377