

Contents

Boxes, tables and maps / ix
The Development and Peace Foundation / x
Notes on the contributors / xi
Abbreviations / xv

Foreword / xvi

UWE HOLTZ

INTRODUCTION Do Crisis Regions Have a Chance of Lasting Peace? The Difficult Transformation from Structures of Violence 1

TOBIAS DEBIEL

The crisis of the state as a cause of war and an obstacle to development / 4 Structures and the changing form of violence / 7 The difficult transformation of countries ravaged by war / 8 Experiences from selected crisis regions / 15
Regional conflict management in the light of September 11 / 25

PART ONE State Failure and the Transformation of War-torn Societies 31

I The Reconstruction and Transformation of War-Torn Societies and State Institutions: How Can External Actors
Contribute? 33

NICOLE BALL

Defining peace-building / 35 Priority peace-building tasks / 36 Donor roles and responsibilities in supporting the rebuilding of war-torn societies / 39 Building on local needs and capacities / 41 Creating sustained partnerships / 42
Enhancing the effectiveness of peace-building assistance / 46
Restarting government / 48 Conclusion / 52

- 2 An Independent Judiciary in Crisis Regions: Challenges for International Law in Cases of State Failure and Armed Conflicts 56

HANS-JOACHIM HEINTZE

An independent judiciary in crisis regions / 57 Safeguarding an independent judiciary in cases of state failure / 59 Practical experience in the role of law following conflicts / 65 General findings derived from UN practice / 67

- 3 Decentralization, Division of Power and Crisis Prevention: A Theoretical Exploration with Reference to Africa 72

ANDREAS MEHLER

Decentralization and the intensification of conflict / 73
Political transformation through decentralization? / 77
Opportunities of decentralization / 79 Conclusion / 82

- PART TWO Crisis Regions between Violence and Development 87

- 4 State-building and Solving Conflicts in the South Caucasus 89

RAINER FREITAG-WIRMINGHAUS

Conflict constellations following the demise of the Soviet Union / 89 The weakness of state structures as a cause of conflict / 93 Takeover of power by national independence movements / 95 Return of the old élites / 96 Presidential rule and an all-powerful executive / 98 External influences and new alliances / 101 The Karabakh conflict: a key role for the South Caucasus / 103 Peace proposals made by the Minsk Group and the common-state model / 104 Key West and the boundaries of authoritarian presidential rule / 106

- 5 Human Security, Liberal Democracy and the Power of Nationalism: The State Crisis in Georgia and Possible Solutions 110

DAVID DARCHIASHVILI

Conditions for creating state security / 112 Human and national security in Georgia / 114 The international stage

- and the role of Russia /118 Internal failings /119 How can the vicious circle of nationalism founded on ethnicity be broken? /122
- 6 The Central American Conflict System: External Players and Changing Violence 129
SABINE KURTENBACH
- The Central American conflict system /130 The pacification of Central America /133 Transformation of violence /137 External players /139 The Central American state as a peace-building player /141
- 7 Stagnant Transformation: Democratic Transition and Military Conversion in Guatemala 146
BERNARDO ARÉVALO DE LEÓN
- The return of civilian politics /147 Precarious democracy in a weak state /149 The continuing 'relative autonomy' of the military /150 Conclusion /152
- 8 The Horn of Turbulence: Political Regimes in Transition 156
AXEL KLEIN
- Root causes of conflict: resource conflicts, environmental degradation and the role of the state /161 Diverse mechanisms of conflict resolutions: is there a modern/traditional dichotomy? /163 Conclusion for external actors /167
- 9 Ethiopia: Crisis of State, Good Governance and the Reform of the Security Sector 171
SIEGFRIED PAUSEWANG
- Historical review /172 A new federal government for Ethiopia /174 The experiment with democracy and good governance /175 Arrogance of state power and the failure of democracy /177 The security sector and the judiciary in Ethiopia /179 The equivalence of party and state: the state belongs to the power-holders /183 Conclusions and future perspectives /185

PART THREE	Regional Conflict Management in the Light of September 11	189
10	'Privatized Violence' and the Terror of September 11: Challenges to Foreign, Security and Development Policy	191
	TOBIAS DEBIEL
	Security, self-defence and 'privatized violence' /192 Recourse to multilateralism or a renaissance of geopolitics? /196 Consequences for selected crisis regions /199 Reorientation of foreign, security and development policy /202
EPILOGUE	'New Realism' or 'New Development': Meeting the Challenges of Identity Conflicts, Organized Crime and Transnational Terrorism	211
	AXEL KLEIN AND JAMES OPORIA-EKWARO
	The complex causality of conflict /211 Identity and justice /213 State failure and responses /216 Meeting the terrorist threat: new realism or new development /220
	Index	227