

Table of contents

Acknowledgments	IX
L3 syntactic transfer – an integrative approach Tanja Angelovska and Angela Hahn	1
Part I. Refining the existing models on L3 syntactic transfer
CHAPTER 1
Language control in the context of L3 acquisition: The centrality of individual differences David W. Green	13
CHAPTER 2
Toward a new understanding of syntactic CLI: Evidence from L2 and L3 acquisition Suzanne Flynn and Éva Berkes	35
CHAPTER 3
Testing the current models of third language acquisition Roumyana Slabakova and Maria del Pilar García Mayo	63
CHAPTER 4
The L2 status factor hypothesis revisited: The role of metalinguistic knowledge, working memory, attention and noticing in third language learning Camilla Bardel and Laura Sánchez	85
CHAPTER 5
Transfer or no transfer; that is the question: The role of the L1 & L2 in L3 acquisition Karoline Wirbatz and Pascal Buttkewitz	103

Part II. New empirical studies on L3 syntactic transfer

CHAPTER 6

On pronouns that drop (out of German) 127

Ylva Falk

CHAPTER 7

Transfer effects in the acquisition of double object constructions in English as an L3 143

Ainara Imaz Agirre and María del Pilar García Mayo

CHAPTER 8

L3 morphosyntactic effects on L1 vs. L2 systems: The Differential Stability Hypothesis 173

Jennifer Cabrelli Amaro

CHAPTER 9

(When) do L3 English learners transfer from L2 German? Evidence from spoken and written data by L1 Russian speakers 195

Tanja Angelovska

CHAPTER 10

Transfer from an L2 in third language learning: A study on L2 proficiency 223

*Laura Sánchez and Camilla BardelPart III. Implications for instructed L3 acquisition

CHAPTER 11

Input Processing and Processing Instruction: Pedagogical and cognitive considerations for L3 acquisition 253

Alessandro Benati and John W. Schwieter

CHAPTER 12

From theory to practice in multilingualism: What theoretical research implies for third language learning 277

Jorge González Alonso and Jason Rothman

CHAPTER 13

Input-Practice-Output: A method for teaching L3 English after L2
German with a focus on syntactic transfer 299

Angela Hahn and Tanja Angelovska

About the contributors 321

Index 325