

CONTENTS

Preface

xi

PART I PSYCHOLOGICAL APPROACHES TO RELIGION

one      The Psychological Nature and Function of Religion

1

Why study religion?, 2

Basic purposes and directions, 2

Defining religion theoretically—is it possible?, 3

Being religious: one thing or many?, 6

Why are people religious?, 8

The defensive-protective tradition, 12

The growth-realization tradition, 15

An integrating framework for the psychology of religion, 17

An attributional approach to the psychology of religion, 19

Motivational bases of attributions, 20

Situational influences, 21

Dispositional influences, 24

Summary and conclusions, 29

two	The Operational Definition of Religion	30
	The nature of operational definitions, 31
	Trait approaches in the psychology of religion, 35
	Religion in terms of nondoctrinal beliefs and attitudes, 37
	Multitrait systems, 45
	Are questionnaires the only means of measuring religion?, 51
	What is the best operational definition of religion?, 52
	Summary and conclusions, 56
	Technical appendix, 57
 PART II RELIGIOUS DEVELOPMENT
three	Childhood: Stages in Religious Development	61
	Stages of cognitive development and their implications for religious development, 62
	Substantive stages of possible relevance to religious development, 65
	The development of specific religious constructs, 69
	Extrinsic-intrinsic religious orientations, 72
	Attribution theory and stages of childhood religion, 74
	Summary and conclusions, 74
four	Impact of Family and Schools on Religious Development	76
	Impact of the family, 77
	Impact of schools, 85
	Peer and college impact, 88
	Attribution theory, and the roles of family and schools in religious development, 91
	Summary and conclusions, 92
five	Religion in Adult Life	93
	Religious belief and behavior among adults, 94
	Work, job, and occupation, 98
	Summary, 102
	Social relationships, 102
	Love and marriage, 103
	Religion and divorce, 105

Intermarriage trends and possible bases,	107
Religion, marriage and children,	109
Religion and the quality of life,	111
Religion and politics,	115
Form of personal faith and religion in adult life,	122
Religious attributions in adult life,	122
Summary and conclusions,	123

six                      Religion and Death                      125

Introduction,	126
Religion, death and the individual,	127
Death in the religio-social context,	149
Religion, death, and attribution theory,	150
Summary and conclusions,	151

PART III RELIGIOUS CHANGE, ORGANIZATION, AND EXPERIENCE

seven                      Religious Experience                      153

Introduction,	154
Past and present conceptualizations and research,	154
Cognitive-physiological arousal and its relevance to religious experiencing,	157
Altered states: religion through the back door?,	164
Religion, brain, and consciousness,	165
Speaking in tongues: glossolalia,	169
A suggestive research model for religious experience,	171
Attribution theory and religious experience,	173
Summary and conclusions,	173

eight                      Mysticism                      175

The early psychologists and mysticism,	176
Conceptualizing mysticism,	176
How is mysticism assessed?,	177
Interrelationships among measures,	179
Some attributional considerations in assessing measures,	180
Reported mystical experience: sampling for empirical studies and survey data,	182
Psychological well-being and the report of mystical experience,	191
Triggering conditions for the report of mystical experience,	193

- A coordinating theory, 196*
- Attribution theory and mystical experience, 196*
- Summary and conclusions, 197*

nine                      Conversion    199

- Introduction, 200*
- The age at which conversion typically occurs, 203*
- Explanatory efforts to confront conversion, 204*
- Summary of criteria distinguishing gradual and sudden conversions, 206*
- Contemporary research on conversion, 210*
- Brainwashing and conversion, 218*
- The reemergence of sudden conversions, 221*
- Conversion and attribution theory, 222*
- Summary and conclusions, 223*

ten                        The Social Psychology of Religious Organizations    225

- Introduction, 226*
- Religious movements, 231*
- At attributional model for religious movements, 237*
- Church-sect and the attributional model, 238*
- Religious commitment, 239*
- Church commitment: five major social psychological contingencies, 242*
- Leaving religion: apostasy, 244*
- Denominational switching, 247*
- Cults, 250*
- Interrelating models of cult formation, 252*
- Secularization theses, 253*
- Attribution theory and religious organizations, 254*
- Summary and conclusions, 255*

PART IV    RELIGION AND BEHAVIOR: SPECIAL TOPICS

eleven                    Religion and Morality    257

- How much can religion be expected to relate to morality?, 258*
- Religion and personal morality, 259*
- Nonmarital sexual behavior, 260*
- Premarital sexual relations, 260*
- Illicit drug use, 264*

Alcohol use and abuse,	266
Interpersonal morality,	270
Type of religiousness,	272
Religion, compassion and altruism,	274
Religion, crime, delinquency, and dishonesty,	278
Morality and form of personal faith,	281
Religion, attribution, and moral behavior,	282
Summary and conclusions,	285

twelve	Religion and Mental Disorder	287
--------	-------------------------------------	------------

A brief look at history,	288
Some concerns and cautions,	290
Functions of religion relative to mental disorder,	291
Religion as an expression of mental disorder,	292
Religion as a socializing and suppressing agent,	295
Religious role models,	297
Religion as a haven,	298
Religion as therapy,	301
Religion as a hazard,	305
Religion and specific forms of mental disorder,	306
A caution on confounding factors: the "hidden" influence of socioeconomic status,	307
Mental disorder and form of personal faith,	314
Religion, mental disorder, and the attributional process,	315
Summary and conclusions,	317

PART V EPILOGUE

thirteen	Psychology, Psychologists, and Religion: Present Realities and Future Trends	319
----------	---	------------

Research in the psychology of religion,	319
Mainstream psychology, psychologists, and the psychology of religion,	323
Relationships between psychology and theology,	325
A concluding note,	326

References	327
Author Index	373
Subject Index	382