

Contents

Preface	vii
1 Psychology's real-world relevance	1
2 Applying psychology to public policy analysis: Three alternative models	17
3 The intellectual capacities of human groups	45
4 Compensatory education: Can we better educate those who need it most?	77
5 Intergroup relations: The psychology of prejudice and discrimination	111
6 On relations between the sexes	155
7 The etiology and control of violent behavior	189
8 Psychological contributions to the search for a warless world	243
9 A design for research: Political psychology's unfinished business	265
References	285
Index	307