

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments

I. INTRODUCTION: AIDS, AGENCY, AND THE STAGE	1
II. AIDS IN PERSPECTIVE	19
1. DISCOURSES OF DISORDER: CONCEPTUALIZING DISEASE, POLICING THE DISEASED	19
1.1 Framing Epidemics: Plague, Tuberculosis, and Biopolitical Discourse	21
1.2 Containing the Venereal Threat: Syphilis and the National Body	25
1.3 Literary Discourses of Disease and the Sick	29
2. AIDS IN THE UNITED STATES: PERCEPTIONS, RESPONSES, AND REPRESENTATIONS	36
2.1 Biomedical and Societal Perceptions of AIDS	37
2.2 Public Policy and Community Responses	43
2.3 AIDS in the News Media	50
2.4 AIDS in U.S.-American Film and Literature	56

2. WIDENING THE SCOPE:
AIDS IN AMERICAN DRAMA OF THE EARLY 1990S	139
2.1 AIDS Knows No Color Line:
Cheryl West's Before It Hits Home	139
2.2 "This Long Disease, My Life:"
Larry Kramer's The Destiny of Me (1992)	154
2.3 Reverse Transcription:
Paula Vogel's The Baltimore Waltz (1991)	174
3. AIDS AND THE QUEER(ED) NATION:
TONY KUSHNER'S ANGELS IN AMERICA (1991/92)	191
3.1 An Epidemic of Representation:
AIDS, Identities, and Communities	198
3.2 Negotiating the Nation:
AIDS, Politics, and History	219
4. BEYOND ANGELS :
AIDS ON THE AMERICAN STAGE SINCE THE MID-1990S	237
4.1 Laughter and Romance:
Paul Rudnick's Jeffrey (1992)	237
4.2 Idioms of Identity:
Chay Yew's A Language of Their Own (1995)	251
4.3 AIDS, Etc.:
Terrence McNally's Love! Valour! Compassion!
(1994) and Paul Rudnick's The Most Fabulous
Story Ever Told (1998)	268
IV. CONCLUSION: STAGES OF AGENCY	285
WORKS CITED	297